

Senate Approves Bill Liberalizing Pay to Jobless

Increases Time of Benefits but Refuses to Include More Employers

Madison—(AP)—The senate passed unanimously today a bill liberalizing the state's unemployment compensation law, but rejected a proposed change which gradually would have made more employers subject to the act.

Under the existing statute only employers having six or more workers are required to establish reserve funds for payment of benefits to those who are laid off.

The industrial commission, anticipating that the federal social security law would be given wider application, proposed to broaden the base in Wisconsin by steps, taking in employers of five or more persons next year and four the following year.

An amendment by Senator Peters (R) Hartford, to continue application of the state law as it now stands, was adopted.

Senator Collier (R) Necedah, proposed an amendment which would have limited the statute by making it effective only upon employers of eight persons.

Separate Funds
It was rejected after Voyta Wraetz, chairman of the industrial commission, told the senate in committee of the whole there was danger Washington might require Wisconsin to "pool" its unemployment reserve funds as is done in other states.

The Wisconsin law now segregates the contributions of each employer and makes him responsible only for his own workers.

The revision bill, which was sent to the assembly, increased the employer's liability for an idle worker from 26 to 68 weeks, and increased the duration of benefits from one-fourth to one-third of the employer's credit weeks.

The bill was amended to allow municipalities to elect whether they want to come under the act for public employees.

Won't Send Band
The senate refused overwhelmingly today to appropriate $25,000 to send the University of Wisconsin band to New York and San Francisco to give Wisconsin representation at world fairs now in progress in those cities.

The proposal was killed, 23 to 4, after Senator Otto Mueller (R) Wausau, chairman of the joint finance committee, declared the money could be used to better advantage. He said the finance committee disapproved.

Senator Milton T. Murray (R) Milwaukee, one of the four favoring the appropriation, argued it would be cheaper to send the band than to set up Wisconsin exhibits. He contended Wisconsin "should have some kind of representation."

Others who voted for the appropriation were Senators Rissler (P) Madison, Nelson (P) Appleton, and Young (D) Milwaukee.

Although Governor Hell was represented as favoring the proposal, Senator Conrad Shearer (R) Kenosha, recalled that the chief executive vetoed a $10,000 appropriation to complete promotional work of the state department of commerce, now abolished.

"It is supposed to be an economic administration," Shearer said.

Hortonville Man Is Injured by Tractor

Hortonville—Chris Oppen, 73, Hortonville, was severely injured about the legs when struck by a tractor driven by George Gabriel, Hortonville, at the King Schwab's farm near here yesterday afternoon. Oppen was attending an auction at the farm when the tractor got out of control and struck him.

Alfred Zimmer, Hortonville farmer, suffered a scalp laceration when struck by a falling plank at his farm yesterday afternoon. He was helping to jack up a building when the accident occurred. Four stitches were required to close the wound.

'Customer' Gets $30 In Shoe Store Holdup

Milwaukee—(AP)—Felix Gezella, manager of a shoe store, told police that a young holdup man obtained $30 from him last night, in quite the opposite of the usual procedure. Gezella said he had fitted the youth with new oxfords and was wrapping up the old ones when the "customer" produced a pistol. He instinctively raised his hands. Gezella related.

But the holdup man commanded: "Put 'em down and keep 'em down. D'you think I want every one to know it's a holdup?"

Sleeps Through Day; Loses Her Bearings

Seattle—(AP)—"Can you tell me what the trouble is?" an excited woman telephoned the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. "What do you mean?" asked a reporter. "I mean why is it so dark outside? It's just like night." "But lady, isn't it usually dark at 9 o'clock?" "Is it 9 o'clock at night?" "Certainly." "Oh, my goodness," she gasped. "I thought it was 9 in the morning. I have slept the day through."

ROYALTY AND PRESIDENT BID EACH OTHER FAREWELL

Four strenuous days ended, King George and Queen Elizabeth waved an official goodbye to the United States (above) and President Roosevelt responded with a two-fisted salute shown at right. First Mr. Roosevelt waved with one hand, and then in this fashion, as the British monarchs left for Canada from the Hyde Park railroad station.

deratings as individual projects. Harrington said "the resultant waste and confusion would be enormous."

Cites "Misstatements"
Harrington asserted there had been "certain glaring misstatements of fact" presented to the investigating committee but said he would not attempt to refute them in detail. He mentioned specifically, however, as disproved by load tests, testimony that a contract for certain trucks which lacked capacity for the work involved had cost the government $1,500,000.

Concerning contentions that better results could have been obtained by doing certain work under private contract, Harrington said he regarded it as "misleading" that the method of contract operation has been held up in testimony as "a uniform paragon of efficiency."

Jobs Main Concern
"I am perfectly willing to concede without argument that it would have been possible," he said, "to have taken the amount of money that has been spent upon our construction program and secured more results in the way of finished work, which of course is equivalent to saying that our unit costs could have been reduced. The effect of this would inevitably have been that the cost in federal funds of each worker on the program would have been greatly increased and that with the same amount of money... a much smaller volume of employment would have been secured."

As to testimony concerning the WPA's relationship with the Workers' Alliance, he denied that the Al-

Capital Wondering Whether Roosevelts Will Go Abroad

Washington—(AP)—Now that this admiring capital is catching its breath after the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth, the big tea-table topic is: Will President Roosevelt and the first lady be guests at Buckingham palace this fall?

Many Washingtonians argue that the king undoubtedly issued an informal invitation to Mr. Roosevelt before their farewell at Hyde park Sunday night. Whether he did so, of course, probably never will be known officially unless the president should accept.

The subject wasn't mentioned in a telegram which the British sovereign sent Mr. Roosevelt late yesterday, for that wouldn't be according to protocol.

The message, received by the chief executive while he was returning to Washington from Hyde park, said the king and queen were "deeply grateful for your hospitality."

The consensus here is that the Roosevelts will not return the visit while the president is in office, though such a trip would not be entirely unprecedented. Woodrow Wilson has been the only American president to visit Europe while in office, but five others—including Franklin D. Roosevelt—have gone outside the United States.

Theodore Roosevelt went to Panama and William Howard Taft visited Panama and Mexico. Warren G. Harding was in Canada in the year of his death, and Calvin Coolidge visited Cuba to open the Pan-American conference in 1933.

Coordination of arms and legs will come next and then the complete stroke will be demonstrated and the children asked to try it out. The excitement of swimming for the first time in their lives will provide a memorable event for the youngsters enrolled in the school.

About 1,000 children from Appleton and vicinity are taking swimming lessons in the "Y" pool. They'll have a chance to "show off" before parents and friends when the "exams" are given the evenings of July 26, 27, and 28.

On those three evenings parents and friends will be invited to the "Y" pool to watch the children demonstrate their abilities. These demonstrations have proven to be one of the most popular features of the school.

Few Voters Have Direct Voice in Naming President

Only 14 States Elect Delegates to National Conventions

BY W. B. RAGSDALE
Washington—(AP)—Only 14 states have primary laws which give the average voter any direct voice in picking delegates to the conventions that will nominate the 1940 presidential candidates.

Twelve of these states select all their delegates in primaries, New York and Illinois choose most of them that way but leave highly important key positions on the delegation to be filled by state conventions.

In Georgia and Alabama, the voters may get a chance to speak their mind with ballots if the party executive committees of those states feel so inclined. The laws leave it up to the committee to decide whether preferential primaries shall be held.

All other states select delegates at party conventions, in which off-stage maneuvering of the leaders often is a factor.

Name 531 Delegates
The 14 states that have primary laws will furnish approximately 531 of the upward of 2,100 delegates to the Democratic and Republican conventions in 1940. This means that three-sevenths of the delegates will be chosen in this manner.

States which pick their whole delegations in primaries, with the number they will send to the next Democratic convention and the approximate size of the Republican delegation, follow:

California, 46 Democratic, approximately 44 Republican; Florida 14 and 12; Massachusetts 34 and 43; Nebraska 14 and 14; New Hampshire 8 and 11; New Jersey 32 and 32; Ohio 42 and 52; Oregon 10 and 10; Pennsylvania 72 and 75; South Dakota 8 and 8; West Virginia 16 and 16; Wisconsin 24 and 24.

New York will select 86 of its 94 Democratic delegates in a primary, and Illinois will pick 50 of its 58 Democratic delegates in the same way.

Depend on Committee
The number of Republican district delegates these and other states choose in this manner depends on the decisions of the Republican national committee.

If Alabama and Georgia should have Democratic primaries, that would supply 46 more names to be chosen by the voters—22 in Alabama and 24 in Georgia. The Republicans in those states always select delegates in conventions.

Several of the primary states require candidates for delegate to specify their first and second choices for presidential nominee. Wisconsin requires a specification of preference for both presidential and vice presidential nominations.

Some states also require that presidential candidates must file applications for participation in the primaries. This usually serves to "smoke out" potential candidates who have not announced definitely that they are in the race.

Johns will speak at the park at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon, July 4, the third and last day of the celebration.

Concessions, juggling, acrobatic, and novelty acts, music, and home talent performances will be presented daily from the stage, jace officials announced today. The free acts will be presented Sunday, July 2, at 3:30 in the afternoon and 8 o'clock at night, Monday, July 3, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and 8 o'clock at night, and Tuesday, July 4, at 3:30 in the afternoon and 8 o'clock at night.

The fireworks, which annually are one of the big features of the celebration, will be displayed at 9 o'clock Tuesday night.

The celebration officially opens Saturday night when Edward Mumm presents his outdoor theater acts. The park will be open from 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon to 11 o'clock Sunday night, from 5 o'clock Monday afternoon to 11 o'clock in the evening, and from 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon to 11 o'clock in the evening.

More than 30 concessions will be set up. Local organizations managing concessions include the Sons of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Exchange club, Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce auxiliary, and the sponsoring club itself.

Proceeds from the celebration, which will be the third the jaces have sponsored, will go towards the milk fund and the Rural Youth day programs.

Landon Predicts Roosevelt Will Not Seek Third Term; Scores New Deal Economics

Boston—(AP)—Alf M. Landon, unsuccessful Republican nominee in the last presidential election, predicted today President Roosevelt would decline to become a candidate for a third term.

At the same time, in a speech prepared for delivery before the Business and Professional Women's Republican club of Massachusetts, the former Kansas governor sharply criticized New Deal economics and those who urged the president to run again in 1940. "We are in the sixth year of extraordinary government spending, to-save policy," Landon asserted, "yet discouragement and chronic unemployment are increasing. This, indeed, is the Roosevelt depression."

"The citizens who are proposing and urging a third term for President Roosevelt will be marked by the future historian as bringing disaster to the republic if they succeed in their unworthy ends."

Doubts Third Race
"But there are enough Americans whose hearts are sound to stay with them. Here indeed the republic has a rendezvous with destiny. How great I don't believe any man with the exaltation and the sense of public service and patriotism that comes from the high office of the presidency will accede to such demands."

"The president, worthy of the trust reposed in him by his fellow citizens, will disdain this suggestion made to him by meaner souls."

Landon said the question of which party wins the next election "is not as important as the type of statesmanship we may expect from the next president."

"The fantastic financial theories of the New Deal which have proved a failure in achieving recovery must not be permitted to remain unchecked, or to become a permanent part of our national life. We must get a foundation for a sound recovery and getting our people back to work."

Must Apply Brakes
"Then the problem of the next Republican president may well be preventing normal healthy recovery from turning into a runaway boom. At the risk of his very reputation he must be prepared to put on the brakes in time, and if he fails we will be facing the true desperate situation of another bus And if that happens, God pity us all."

"Already the dangerous idea, gaining credence that we can elect anyone we nominate. That idea has gotten not only the Republican party but the country into difficulty in times past. In fact, we are paying today, both as a party and as a country, because we fell for that idea too many times."

"Of course, under our way of doing things, the new chief executive must have a unified party behind him. Certainly this is not true today of the Democratic party, which is torn to pieces not only by the president's methods and policies but by threats of a third term."

BITTEN BY DOG

Issue Warrants In Relief Cases

Four Milwaukee Men Charged With Getting Aid by Fraud

Milwaukee—(AP)—Four men today were charged with obtaining relief by fraud, in warrants obtained on complaint of Hugh Delaney, counsel for the relief department.

J. Ray Lamboy, 50, a former judicial candidate and organizer of unemployment clubs, was named in six counts totaling $544.11, supplementary relief he was accused of having obtained in 1932 through 1935 while a daughter was earning $4,500.

Frank Ullenberg, 58, was charged in three counts with obtaining $228.28 in 1937-38 while he failed to reveal earnings by his wife of $977.67. Anthony Karl, 30, was named in three counts totaling $273.48 received in 1935-36 while, it was claimed, he earned $788.06 in a department store.

The fourth warrant charged John Datka, 53, with receiving $45.75 in March, 1936, although receiving $115 from an insurance company.

Start Movement For Insurance of Business Loans

Bankers Oppose Measure
On Theory It Is Another
New Deal Adventure

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—To stimulate economic recovery in a time of timidity and hesitation, a movement has begun in congress looking toward insurance of business loans. Already bankers are starting to fight the measure on the theory that it means another adventure by government in the field of banking.

This difference of opinion is typical of many others that have developed in the last five or six years, with the result that, instead of getting workable legislation in which there is whole-hearted cooperation, drastic measures are passed which bring into being an entirely new set of headaches.

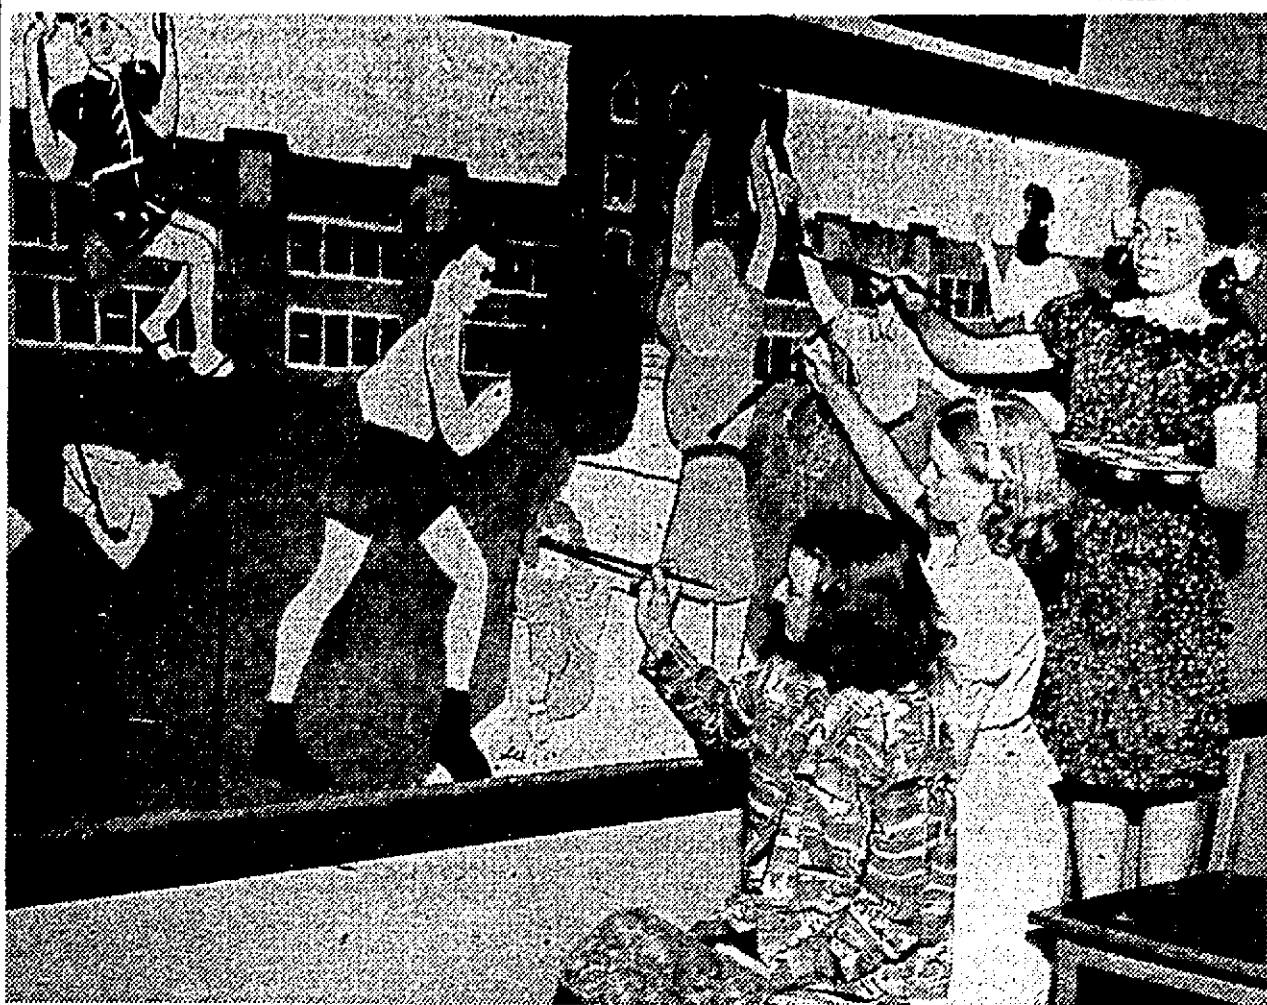

Unhappily, many private bankers are taking an intransigent attitude toward the help that government can give small business men in the field of credit. It is being said that all who deserve credit are getting it, that the government is about to make a series of unsound loans, that this is but another example of government inefficiency, waste etc.

Unhappily, too, this is just the kind of argument which convinces a majority of congress that the opposite must be true. For some strange reason, in fighting legislation, the American conservative is rarely willing to consider that perhaps there is some need instead of no need. In Britain, the conservative uses just the opposite approach. He recognizes the existence of a need, but then insists that the legislative remedy fit the need in specific form and not indulge in the generalities which take the government far afield.

For several years, there has been need of an intermediate credit system in America. Commercial banks were never designed to furnish intermediate credit, when bankers talk about credit, they usually mean short term credit for businesses. They do not think of "mortgages" for construction as a form of bank credit, because they customarily think of 90-day loans and even 9-month loans as the type of bank credit that is used by "business."

What the demand for insured loans for business comes from is that part of the credit mechanism which is really mortgage credit—the building of plant, of facilities, or both. Banks are not expected to furnish this kind of credit, so when the discussion of insured loans arises, the issue is complicated by appraising the credit needs of business in terms of short term rather than long term advances.

Lately, banks have been making some 5 and even 7-year loans. This is offered as proof that no longer is there any need for new machinery for intermediate credit. But an examination of these 5 and 7-year loans will show that they are the exception which proves the rule and that they are customarily granted to companies which can float issues in the investment banking markets.

ROOSEVELT SCHOOL PUPILS PAINT MURAL ON RECREATION

As for the smaller companies, unless there is a record of earnings of a gilt-edge sort, they cannot get intermediate credit. The banks properly object to joining in speculative loans. But speculative loans are what make recovery possible. Risks have to be taken by someone, and the sum total of the risks taken measured against the losses will show that mortality is not as great as is commonly supposed and that payment of insurance premiums by good companies will help offset such losses among the poorer risks.

Simple Principle

The principle is a simple one: shall a system of insurance of private loans be established in America with government support such as is now successfully operated with respect to housing loans? Most private bankers say "no," though here and there are some progressive bankers who have sent word to the government that, with certain safeguards, it would be a wonderful thing for the banks which are not able to earn anything on their idle money.

The Wall Street point of view is that, if the government will repeal most or all of its reform measures, change the tax laws, and "give business a chance," there will be no need for new laws to make intermediate credit or any other kind of credit available.

But the Washington point of view is that such a contingency is not likely to happen so long as the votes are counted quantitatively instead of qualitatively, and that a system of concentrated wealth can no longer be depended upon to insure high wave levels or employment.

Between these two viewpoints is, of course, the truth. Some measure of revision of tax laws and some changes in the Wagner law and other broadly phrased statutes would be helpful, but America would not

Engineer Says Tin Cans for Roads Wouldn't be Practical

Down in New Orleans Mayor Robert S. Maestri, who is acquiring a reputation for energy in rebuilding the city, now is paving streets with tin cans from the dump heap.

City Engineer Alfred Wickesberg said today that tin cans wouldn't be very practical for streets in Appleton because the supply is so limited there wouldn't be enough to pave one street.

In New Orleans, the tin cans, flattened by steam shovels, form a flat sub-layer to keep the pavement from being pushed into the soft mud and earth that underlies the whole city and makes street building so difficult and costly through uneven settling. In Appleton the surface is hard enough so that the cans are not needed, the engineer said.

And then, Wickesberg figured that tin cans wouldn't make such a good sub-grade material because the cans would rust and disappear within a very few years. In Appleton cans are of much more value as fill than they would be for road bed material, he said.

The tin cans in New Orleans are readily at hand in a huge mid-city dump where refuse has been piled for more than a half century. It got the name of "Silver City" from the sun glistening on a million tin cans. Shovels pick up the cans and dump them on the pavement nearby, where steam shovels flatten them for road use.

Inhalator Will Be Installed in Kunitz Ambulance

Machine for Emergency
Use Will be Gift of Appleton Elks Lodge

The facilities of an inhalator will be made available to citizens of Appleton and vicinity through action of the Appleton Elks.

The inhalator will be made part of the equipment of the new Oscar Kunitz ambulance so that it will be ready for use in case of emergency. It was decided to place the inhalator in the Kunitz ambulance because it is the only one in this area. No charge will be made for use of the inhalator.

The purchase of the inhalator for $230 is being made by the Elks lodge as part of a national program in which every lodge performs some civic duty for the year.

The machine has two head pieces so that treatment can be given two persons simultaneously. It carries two oxygen tanks and is so compact that it can be carried in a good-sized luggage bag. Provisions for its installation in the ambulance are being made by Mr. Kunitz.

Russell Williams, chairman of the Elks committee in charge of the program, said that a number of proposals were considered before selection of the inhalator was made. One of the proposals was an iron lung, but this was turned down because no solicitation was planned by the lodge for any such purchase.

The machine has been ordered from the American LaFrance company and is expected to arrive here in the near future.

Picnics at Parks
C.Y.W. of First Congregational church is having a picnic this evening at Pierce park.

The vacation Bible school of First Baptist church which opened last week will come to a close Friday with a picnic at Erb park at 3:30 in the afternoon. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock. Spangler preached a sermon on "Gate of Opportunity" at the children's day program.

The board of trustees of St. Paul Lutheran church will meet at 7:30 Wednesday night at the church. Last Sunday the Rev. F. M. Brandt, pastor, spoke on "Dwelling in the Love of God," and the Rev. T. J. Sauer, honorary pastor, preached in German.

St. Martha Guild of All Saints Episcopal church is holding a picnic today at the A. C. Denney home at Hyvrest.

"God the Preserver of Man" was the subject of the lesson-sermon for Sunday at First Church of Christ, Scientist. The following quote from the Bible was read: "Fear thou not; for I am with thee; be not dismayed; for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. For I the Lord Thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee."

Pegler Says We've Come Far Since Prohibition Hate Days

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER
New York—Lifting a glass of champagne in the White House in Washington, the president of the United States faced the king of England and drank a toast to the friendship between this country and the British empire. Most of us can remember a time when a president could have been impeached for that—not for entertaining the British king in the presidential palace of the republic, although that would have been a grave political error at times within the memory of men now living, but for drinking a glass of champagne. And I suggest that the fact that the president may now openly drink an alcoholic beverage without provoking so much as a speech in congress might teach us that some of our bitterest furies and prejudices are artificial.

Warren Harding was compelled to conceal his toddy behind a book on the shelf and to frequent a little hideaway, and Herbert Hoover, not an abstainer though a Quaker, went up the pole for the term of his presidency out of fear or respect for a fanatic law which cluttered and in some cases corrupted the courts and made liars and hypocrites of many public men. A dry congressman, returning from a junket to Cuba, brought his baggage through the customs at Key West under the immunity of his office and became the laughing stock of the country because his trunk sprang a leak. Hard-eyed men with hatred in their hearts haunted Capitol Hill checking the records of senators and congressmen on one issue, prohibition, without regard for their attitude on any other problem of the country. Agents of the government shot innocent citizens dead on the mere suspicion that they might be transporting a bottle or case of some miserable hooch distilled in a tin boiler, and a member of the United States senate was shot in the head by mistake in a pursuit of a bootlegger and died horribly from the effects of his wound.

Washington Was Heavy In Caves Consumption
A secretary of a dry president was afraid to drink in the presence of others even in the home of a friend and sneaked quick ones behind the pantry door, and the cloves consumed in Washington alone in any single week of prohibition was enough to speckle all the hams produced in the state of Virginia from the beginning of time until the date of these presents.

It is almost impossible to believe now that a people so proud of their intelligence and reason ever could have permitted themselves to become so highly inflamed on the question, but, nevertheless, it is true that if any one of the three prohibition presidents had even touched his lips to a glass of wine or grog in the White House or elsewhere and had permitted that fact to become public a solemn effort would have been made to remove him from office.

Yet today Mr. Roosevelt may toast the British king in champagne and a Catholic bishop recently made a gesture of courtesy and amity to the leader of the Ku Klux Klan, and these incidents and the king's visit are sad reminders that people often hate and fight at the instigation of ambitious demons without reasons of their own.

Hoover Picked Up Pegler's Beverage Bill
On the issue of prohibition the hatred and malicious cruelty of those who approved poisoning and shooting, raids on people's homes and the law of a life for a pint, was matched by the anger of those who were determined not only to break the law but to destroy it and to humble its supporters. In some sections of the country the stranger

Moderate Gains Are Registered On Steel Market

Ingot Production Extends Upturn; Output Is Double That of Year Ago

Cleveland — Changes in finished steel demand generally are for the better. Releases against flat-rolled steel orders are increasing gradually, and moderate gains have appeared in requirements of some miscellaneous users, according to magazine Steel.

Ingot production has extended its recent upturn to 53½ per cent, a 13-point rise for the week, and comparing with 25½ per cent a year ago. This marks an increase of 8 points the past three weeks, but subsequent gains this month are likely to be small. Some districts plan unchanged schedules at least until after July 4.

Auto Output Up
Termination of the Briggs strike not only helped to push automobile assemblies up sharply last week but permits the resumption of tool and die work for new models. However, possibility is seen of additional disturbances among tool and die workers through union demands on other motor companies.

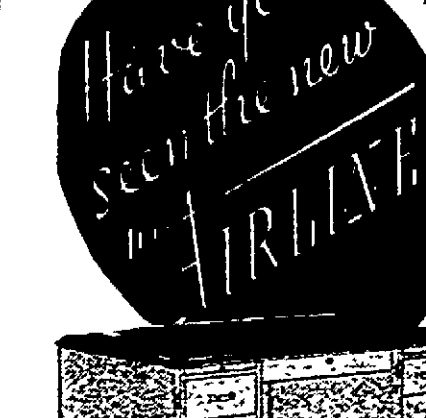

Motorcar assemblies of 65,265 units last week more than doubled those of the preceding holiday period and were 62.5 per cent larger than a year ago. General Motors increased from 23,670 to 30,640, Chrysler from 1100 to 8145, Ford from 1600 to 17,600 and all others from 6075 to 8820.

Ingot production was heavier in most centers last week. Pittsburgh increased 1 point to 43 per cent and Youngstown was up 3 points to 51. Other gains included 3 points to 73 at Wheeling, 7 points to 67 at Birmingham, 5 points to 40 in New England, 8 points to 68 at Cincinnati and 9½ points to 47 at St. Louis. Chicago declined 1 point to 52½. Unchanged districts were eastern Pennsylvania at 37, Cleveland at 53, Buffalo at 44 and Detroit at 57.

read warnings on the door of his hotel room that the police had the right to let themselves in or chop their way in at any moment to search for liquor and that he might be sent to prison for possessing as little as one drink or even on the raiders' word that they smelled alcohol on his breath. Travelers on the roads were halted by ambulances and if guilty were arrested or permitted to bribe themselves free, and yet there were great numbers of Americans who thought they believed in this law as a matter of morals and hated as devils all those who broke it and in many cases even those who merely disapproved it.

But there may be hope. Since those days I have taken refreshments with Herbert Hoover himself, and speaking for myself the beverage was Scotch and soda and Mr. Hoover lifted the check. I had never expected to see the day when Mr. Hoover would take his turn.

Urges Law Graduates to 'Keep Alive Interests as Students'

Madison—(AP)—After hearing Chief Justice Marvin B. Rosenberry's advice to "keep alive your interests as students and you will not become merely searchers for cases," 46 graduates of the Marquette University Law school were admitted to the bar by the supreme court Monday.

The students were presented by their dean, F. X. Swiellik, before six of the black-robed jurists. Justice Chester A. Fowler was absent. Justice Rosenberry, before administering the oath, told the graduates, their parents and friends that "while it is true that great material rewards go to some lawyers, it is also true that the great mass work hard, live long, and die poor."

The chief justice said he was "impressed" by recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court indicating "a great shift of power from the states to the federal government." As a result, he declared he was "certain . . . that the responsibility of congress and of the various state legislatures has been greatly increased."

Burden on Courts
"In my opinion it is a move in the right direction. In the last quarter of a century the courts have carried on undue responsibility for so-called social welfare. In the next quarter, legislatures will realize more than they have in the past that they cannot enact legislation with the hope and expectation that it will be declared unconstitutional by the courts. "In my opinion therefore you are entering upon a new era in the development of the law. We must all, courts and bars alike, adjust our thinking and re-examine our premises. If I were to leave you a word of advice, it would be that you should always have upon your desk some subject for study and research, having nothing to do with your every day practice. It will keep alive your interests as 'students' of the law and you will not become merely searchers for cases to assist you in courtroom argument."

Robert Rieser, Madison, president of the state bar association, presented the graduates with free six-month membership cards.

Life Insurance Business Is Subjected to TNEC Scrutiny

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—The life insurance business is being subjected to the most thorough combing over that it has experienced since the investigation conducted by Charles E. Hughes 30 years ago.

Hearings before the O'Mahoney temporary national economic committee are covering the insurance business in installments and have proceeded to the point where insurance company executives like Frederick H. Ecker, chairman of the board of Metropolitan Life, are openly fearful that federal regulation is on the way. Officials conducting the investigation say they have not reached conclusions as to recommendations.

In general, the investigation by TNEC, which is really being conducted by the SEC, has been directed toward study of the vast sums of investment money which the life insurance companies control, and toward rate agreements between the companies. It also is devoting some attention to sales methods, suggesting that individuals are pushed by high-pressure selling methods into taking insurance which they cannot afford to carry.

The turnover in insurance policies is enormous and carries through to the payoff provided for in the contract—about 18 per cent at the maximum, according to the figures, the remainder being terminated by lapse, surrender or in other ways. In the last 10 years about $158,000,000 in life insurance has been written and against that about $133,000,000 has been terminated, 80 per cent of this face value being terminated in ways which represent frustration of the original idea with which the policy-holder took out his insurance.

Probing Extent Of Rate Fixing Combines

During the last few days, the TNEC testimony has been concerned with ascertaining the extent to which companies combine to fix rates. One memorandum from an insurance executive to his superior reported that Haley Fiske, president of Metropolitan Life, has refused to go into a conference with other companies to fix certain group insurance rates. It was suspected that this was an attempt by Metropolitan to "break over the rates," but Mr. Fiske denied that and said he believed that getting together with other company representatives, even in an informal way, would be a violation of law.

Memorandums concerning another meeting reported that one insurance executive had been found to be straining the rules for his company's advantage and that he was "badly chastised," but that it was apparent on the basis of his improper practices that "he deserved

A total of 701 treatments were given pupils at the orthopedic school during May, according to the monthly report of Inez Christenson, physiotherapist. Of the total, 134 were special physiotherapy treatments. During the month six patients were discharged and three were enrolled.

Young People's Group Planning Variety Show

Fremont — Plans have been completed by the Young People's society of St. Paul's Lutheran church for the variety show and strawberry festival to be held at the Fremont village hall Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Marquardt entertained the five hundred club Saturday evening. Three tables take unsafe risks with their reserves in order to get business. The question is more as to state and federal regulation, or rather supervision, of such non-competitive rate making. Although life insurance executives are naturally nervous over the possibilities, it is probable that congress, not to mention SEC officials themselves, will be inclined to go slow and easy in dealing with life insurance and the disposition would be to consider changes only where existing practices are shown beyond doubt to justify action.

Schedule Repairs At Senior School

Plastering, Painting Necessary; Equipment To be Checked

Although no major repairs will be necessary this summer at the new senior high school, many minor ones will be needed after the wear and tear of 1,400 students during the term just ended.

William Egert, superintendent of janitors will supervise the work which will be done by janitors at the school.

There will be some plastering in about a dozen rooms and corridors principally in the corrective gymnasium and the corridors adjoining the gymnasium. Damaged floor tiles will be replaced.

The lavatory floors in the shop section are sinking slightly and will be repaired while all glass window caulking will be checked and repaired. Outdoor sidewalks which have cracked will be fixed.

Light paint which shows finger marks and becomes soiled easily will be replaced with a darker paint in some stairways and in the music section. Water pressure in the main lobby and cafeteria drinking fountains will be boosted and a water pipe in the home arts kitchen will be insulated.

All typewriters, adding machines, mimeographs, gloves, sewing machines, manual arts motors and other motors and fans will be checked, cleaned and oiled. New bubblers may be installed in various parts of the building.

Manual arts equipment will be reconditioned and knives will be sharpened. A new shaft for the circle saw also is needed.

Desks and chairs that are in poor condition will be refinished and the janitors will check the nuts and bolts on chairs and desks throughout the building.

Hotels in the United States buy about 480,000 dozen sheets and 800,000 blankets annually.

Gantter Angered by Governor's Refusal to Accept His Tax Plan

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison — Assemblyman William J. Gantter of Kaukauna, (R), today delivered himself of some angry comments on Governor Heil and particularly his secretarial advisors who have vetoed Gantter's plans for solving the Heil administration's financial problem.

"Some legislators," observed the Kaukauna representative, "also have some business ability, and just as much brain as the governor's staff." "The executive office force knows all about this thing," he said sarcastically. "The assemblymen don't know anything about it."

Gantter was angered because the governor's office had refused to consider a revenue and economy plan which he submitted after Heil himself had asked for suggestions at a recent legislative caucus at which the problem was reviewed.

When Heil presented his original sales tax plans, Gantter explained, Republican legislators expressed so much opposition that he asked them to work out their own ideas for financing the state budget.

Gantter applied himself to the problem and evolved two alternative substitutes. The first would entail retrenchment in state activities to make ends meet and to make new taxes unnecessary. The second would have made "slight increases" in all income tax rates, personal and business, to substitute for the sales tax, which Gantter says he opposes vigorously.

"By accepting this plan it would not cost the state or the taxpayers one extra penny for collections," he explained, pointing out that income tax machinery is already set up, while the Heil tax program calls for new and expensive tax collectors.

"The plan suggested by the governor's staff will cost thousands of dollars," he finished.

The Kaukauna legislator, elected for the first time last fall in the Republican landslide to succeed a Democrat, claimed that his proposals have more support in the legislature than the governor's own tax bill. But he can't persuade Governor Heil or his aides, he reports.

IS CINEMA PRODUCTION A RACKET?

During cross-examination of Judge Manton by the government it transpired that Harry Warner of Warner Bros. Company, one of the Big Eight in picture production, "loaned" the judge $50,000 and that at the same time the Warner Company had a case before the judge which was shortly thereafter decided in its favor. Reporters present at the trial remarked upon the stony countenance of the jurors when Judge Manton tried to persuade them that this was a legitimate practice, that neither Mr. Warner was swayed into making the loan by reason of the existence of the lawsuit nor was the judge influenced in the slightest in coming to a decision by reason of the loan.

No more time need be spent upon that phase of the judge's "defense" excepting to remark that he had an amazingly low estimate of jurors' mental equipment to even try to plaster such a reprehensible argument at them.

It is about a year now that Jimmy Roosevelt, the American edition of a crown prince, hired out with Goldwyn, another of the Big Eight, at a reputed $50,000 a year, since which time he has done nothing more than appear as a sort of traveling ambassador and has been taking bows even in European centers.

There was nothing wrong in Judge Manton borrowing $50,000 from Harry Warner had there been no litigation involving Warner before him. But something of the judge's smear is bound to spatter upon young Roosevelt when we observe that the influence of his name has already been used very effectively at Washington to prevent the decision by congress and to hold up the proceedings by the Department of Justice against the Big Eight for practices claimed to be in violation of law and equally in violation of business ethics.

Before congress there has been pending for long a bill to outlaw block booking and blind selling of films by the producers. Under the rule of block booking a theater is forced to buy its pictures in blocks and denied the privilege of selecting such individual pictures as it considers suitable for its clientele or answerable to their demands. Blind booking, a practice also compelled by the producers, requires the purchase of films by the theaters before they can be seen, oftentimes before they are even released.

It is obvious that these practices are highly beneficial to the producer and just as hurtful to the theater owners. They eliminate practically all risk in the production business. If a poor or worthless film is produced it is sold nevertheless. The practices tend, too, to eliminate all individualism from the theater business, and prevent that nicer form of competition whereby the one who selects carefully and presents attractively earns the public support and approval of his community.

The act of congress designed to do away with these practices simply could get nowhere until a New Deal senator by the name of Neely from West Virginia, aroused at the withering effect of purchased influence's bony hand, accused Democratic leaders of "naked, unblushing and uncomplimentary acts" designed to put the bill to death.

But clear it is beyond respectable argument that Judge Manton committed a bitterly improper act when he accepted a loan from a litigant before him. Yet if the situation in respect to Roosevelt is not identical with that in respect to Manton—and it is not—isn't it nevertheless a cousin of a sort? Young Roosevelt knew when Goldwyn offered him big money that there had been an uproar against alleged suffocating tactics of the Big Eight. If he kept in touch with the daily news he must have known that federal courts have already entered judgment upon jury verdicts heaping treble damages upon a combination of cinema producers for crushing the life out of exhibitors when they did not toe the mark or bend the knee. He could not have been blind to the fact that the Department of Justice had finally entered into a detailed investigation of denounced practices and that bills were bound to be presented before congress to outlaw block booking and blind selling, and that the Big Eight would fight tooth and nail against any of these inroads upon its privileges and perquisites.

We think that about 19 men out of 20 placed as was Jimmy Roosevelt at the time would have concluded that he was being paid $50,000 a year in the expectation that his influence was worth more than that to the producers and that it would be very helpful with the Department of Justice and with congress even though nothing specifically was ever mentioned concerning it.

It must be remembered that when Harry Warner loaned $50,000 to Judge Manton not a word was said about the pending lawsuit.

THE HARDEST JOB

When the water started pouring into the Squalus engine room a man by the name of Maness was standing nearby facing aft in the direction of the crew's quarters, the aft torpedo room and the engine room.

In the described compartments were about thirty men including Maness' pal at whose approaching marriage he was to act the part of best man.

It became the manifest duty of Maness to get that door shut and to get it shut in a hurry. The ship was tilting badly at an angle of something like 35 degrees. The door was not a big one, only two feet wide and three feet high but of solid metal and great weight.

As Maness undertook his task he observed five men running toward him. He permitted them to pass through. Had he hesitated longer, had he not in fact immediately responded to that iron discipline which makes fighting units formidable he would have risked, and probably destroyed, the lives of the 33 who were saved. He threw all his fine young strength into the closing of that door and then he whirled the screws to make it fast and water tight. He afterwards said, "There was no time for sentiment." That depends much upon how one defines sentiment. Sentiment is not always as limp as a wet dish rag. It may include a liberal amount of the sort of fine and manly intelligence Maness employed, the sentiment for the greater number, the sentiment for logic and reason and sense.

The truth of it is that Maness did not weaken at the necessity of making a heartbreaking decision, and in the strength he evidenced there was interwoven some of the very best sentiment that can be imagined. Had he weakened, had he surrendered to the maudlin weakness that is so erroneously designated as sentiment, he would probably have destroyed 33 more lives than were bound to be destroyed anyway upon that unhappy occasion.

Fortunate is the navy that has plenty of men whose thinking apparatus is as clear, whose muscles are as supple and powerful and whose resolution may be as inflexible as that evidenced by Maness.

TRAFFIC MOVEMENT IN THE RAIN

The Appleton police force, being essentially human, must have a human dislike for getting out into the rain. At the same time, it has little choice in the matter. Consequently, it is difficult to reconcile the cluttered condition of the College avenue business district, whenever a downpour occurs, with the fact that traffic regulations are supposed to be enforced under all conditions.

The immediate causes of dangerous and delaying snarls are double parking, hogging of two traffic lanes, and making improper turns at intersections (i. e.: turning right from left hand lanes, and vice-versa). These causes, which exist at all times to some extent, are particularly dangerous when the skid menace is present and when rain reduces visibility.

Appleton is one of the few valley cities with a principal thoroughfare accommodating four lanes of traffic—two in each direction. Yet improper driving practices may reduce the flow of cars by one half, usually at a time when we most need a steady movement of automobiles and pedestrians.

We appreciate the problem thrust into the hands of Appleton police by an unfortunately large number of uninformed drivers, (particularly on Saturdays), and we believe that no policeman should be on duty on a rainy night unless protected with a highly visible white raincoat. We also appreciate the fact that, under circumstances such as we have described, Appleton is a more difficult and dangerous place to drive than cities with far greater population and motor traffic.

This situation can be corrected.

Opinions of Others

THE COTTON ISSUE
It is doubtful if any one has put his finger more squarely on the basic issue underlying the cotton problem than did Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, in an address before the members of that organization at New Orleans on Saturday. "We have ignored until a dangerously late hour," said Dr. Murchison, "the fundamental truth that if we are to save the cotton farmer we must first save cotton as an article of commerce and consumption."

Dr. Murchison, examining this newest policy of the administration, finds that it is "probably the most indefensible that has ever originated from a responsible American source." We could be the first, he notes, "to set the example of subsidizing a raw material that has hitherto had a free market, and which is produced in friendly countries." He ridicules the statement of the secretary of agriculture that the subsidy would not represent dumping, but would merely constitute an effort to retain "our normal share of the world market for cotton." If that theory is sound for us, then it would be equally sound for others, he observes, as, example, Great Britain. Last year, points out Dr. Murchison, Great Britain's exports of cotton goods amounted to 1,200,000,000 square yards; but eight years ago they were averaging 3,000,000,000 yards. By pursuing Mr. Wallace's line of reasoning Great Britain would obviously be justified in restoring to an export subsidy in order to recover her lost foreign business. "If Great Britain undertook to do this thing," observes Dr. Murchison, "the United States would be the first to denounce it and to impose retaliating duties on British goods."

Mr. Wallace will be hard put to it to answer this bill of particulars against his export subsidy. And it will not make his task any easier when he recalls his own words of Sept. 30, 1932, when he said: "If the consumption of American cotton is to be subsidized, the subsidies ought to be applied to domestic consumption. . . . If gifts of cotton are to be made, our own people ought to come first."—New York Herald-Tribune.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—An old friend of Lillian Russell sat with me at the Stork Club last night and told some tales of the most glamorous and beautiful woman of the American stage.

One story was of a little Italian bootblack who shined shoes so well and labored so earnestly on the sidewalks of New York that he won the friendship of several Big Men of Wall Street. From that start he rose until he was a man of great wealth himself. He, like so many other men of that day, became madly enamored of the great Lillian.

Miss Russell had a home on 57th Street across from Carnegie Hall, and the one-time bootblack often drove up in his fine carriage to call. There was a little girl in Miss Russell's household who, like children do, loved to stand and look out the front window. Whenever she saw the rich man's carriage pull up at the curb she would run back to Miss Russell and shout: "That old Mr. Blank is here again. Don't let him in unless he brought me a present!"

The giving of gifts of lavish cost was quite the usual thing among Lillian Russell's admirers. This same one-time bootblack presented her with a toilette set of solid gold, with the initials "L.R." set in diamonds on each piece. Included in the set was a shoe horn—of gold, of course—which was distinguished by a long handle. With it the shapely Lillian could put on her shoes without having to bend.

One summer Miss Russell took a house at Atlantic City and took the toilet set along. She never went bathing in the surf herself, but the girls of her show did, and she sometimes went down and sat on the beach with them. She would take along the long-handled shoe horn so the girls could use it to put on their beach sandals.

One day a pet dog, frolicking in the sand, snatched up the golden shoe horn and ran with it into the water. Miss Russell and the girls put up a commotion, which delighted the dog who assumed he had become very popular. He swam out with the costly trinket until, tiring of the sport, he let it drop into the depths; and that was the last of Lillian Russell's golden shoe horn.

Do you dunk doughnuts? It isn't important, but the doughnut people seem to think it is, so they sent out a questionnaire to some prominent people and now report that among prominent New Yorkers who dunk unashamedly are His Honor the Mayor, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, Lou Gehrig the ballplayer, Billy Rose who is tiny enough to pass right through a doughnut and Brenda Frazier, who has even been photographed in the act of dunking.

New laws have stopped the summer fireworks display which was a feature at Palisades Park on the Jersey side of the Hudson River, so in their lieu the Park uses very powerful searchlights whose beams shoot across the river and illuminate Grant's Tomb—and also pour into the windows of Riverside Drive apartment house dwellers. . . . Perley Boone, publicity director for the World's Fair, takes life and the Fair too seriously. Annoyed by the activities of some amateur cameramen the other day, he pushed his way in among them and shouted: "I command you to stop—in the name of the World's Fair!" Try stopping something in the name of the World's Fair sometime, then yawn and forget the whole business. . . .

Waitresses sometimes have high intelligence. Miss Jeannette Allard, who comes from Biddeford, Maine, slings hash at the girls still refer to waiting tables at the Piccadilly, and will talk to you fluently in half a dozen languages—Japanese and Portuguese being just a couple of the tougher ones; or if you don't want to talk Japanese, Miss Allard can give you a piano recital, but good. She's waiting table to earn her way through Columbia University where she is studying—more languages.

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO
Tuesday, June 11, 1929
John Haug, Stephen Balliet, R. W. Getchov, John L. Hettinger and F. W. Guenther were to attend the forty-third annual convention of the Illinois and Wisconsin Retail Coal Merchants association at Oshkosh that week.

The Rev. Harry Schuller, ordained into the Catholic priesthood the previous Friday, celebrated his first mass at St. Joseph church that morning. The Rev. Mr. Schuller was the son of the late Prof. and Mrs. Engelbert Schuller.

St. Mary High school of Menasha graduated its first class the previous evening. It consisted of 14 members.

25 YEARS AGO
Tuesday, June 16, 1914
A petition had been circulated among the residents of the Junction district asking the appointment of a policeman for that portion of the city.

The fate of the Lawrence School of Expression was to be decided by college trustees. Prof. J. S. Gams, who built the school up from two to fifty-five students in seven years, had resigned to do work at the University of Minnesota. Among the graduates that year were Miss Margaret Sherman, Appleton, and Florence Lund, Winneconne.

A Verse for Today

THE MIRACLE

A miracle of light and shade
Occurs each day in my back-yard.
I see the flower bed I made,
And the green grass with glory starred.

I know that there are grander sights
Than the recurring shadows cast
Upon familiar sweet delights
That are in my small garden mased.

But purple violets and phlox,
And mignonette and rosemary
Bring me such happiness, it mocks
The world beyond my own rooftop.

For in my loved back-yard there grows
A blossom that is heaven-sent.
It wears the petals of a rose,
But I have christened it "Content!"

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—It is no longer possible to turn the heat on Congress in June and July. Both houses have air-cooling this year.

That may sound like something trivial but it isn't. The heat around this place would roast a jungle monkey. For years it was taken for granted that Congress would rush through its business in early June and escape the heat. But now a member of Congress can come to work in the cool of the forenoon, remain in an air cooled region throughout the day and go home in the evening without facing a touch of the old torrid blast.

The senators have the most elaborate layout, which is possible because there aren't so many of them. The senator drives to the capitol in the morning, into an underground garage where an attendant takes it over and parks it for him in a reserved spot.

Out Of The Sun
Not again during the day must the senator get out into the blazing sun. He strolls through a cool underground passage into the Senate Office Building, entirely air conditioned this summer for the first time. Only part of it was finished last summer. It isn't true that the Democrats air-conditioned their own offices first.

The senator may work in his office or an air-conditioned hearing room until noon when the Senate convenes.

Senators used to sweat, and take off their coats as their collars wilted, but not any more.

At noon the senator can take the underground trolley for a noisy two-block ride over to the capitol.

An hour or so of debate may drive him to eat, so he rides down the Senate's private elevator to the Senate restaurant where a dozen negro waiters know all his whims and fancies. The menu is varied and the food moderately good. He can't have beer. The members voted against it. The House permits it in their restaurant, however.

Cool Ride Home

The Senate usually adjourns for the day at 5 o'clock or earlier. Back to his office by trolley, the senator can work a while longer or go out into the buried garage and take a cooling ride home through the breezy Rock Creek Canyon, which is one blessing this city shares above all others.

It is not so hot during summer as one were transferred out of the city so the delegates might be cool and collected instead of hot and cantankerous. That's why the Russo-Japanese war of 1905 was settled by the treaty of Portsmouth, New Hampshire. Theodore Roosevelt asked them to come to Washington and make peace, but they came in June and that was no time to make peace in Washington. If they had had air conditioning, they might have stayed here and Portsmouth would have lost an important place in history.

We don't mean to imply by the above that Congress is going to work on through the summer just because they can do it coolly. But summer work is no longer the broiling death-dealing business for older congressmen that it used to be. Now they can fight it out on this line if it takes all summer—provided the cooling machinery holds out.

"THE CHRISTIAN FRONT"
Editor-Post-Crescent: Sir: An editorial appearing in your issue of June 1st with above title is interesting and one wishes there had been more information given. It is a warning to beware of fraud and hypocrisy seeking evil ends under the Christian armor or banner.

What and where is the true "Christian Front" to-day? The line of battle will be found in the minds and hearts of men. It is a moral and spiritual war—in which hate and death, or life and peace appear, as the forces of one or the other are dominant. The weapons of the one army are the powers of force and violence, of the other the power of Christian good will and wisdom.

It is evident that opposing nations today are preparing to use the same weapons for the same purpose, of gaining or retaining economic resources, which one group affirms were stolen or unjustly and exclusively appropriated, and which the other declares shall not be stolen from themselves.

The hope of the world is that the organized body of Christians shall separate itself from the forces of death, and using the Christian armor battle for justice and peace which come, not through violence, but only with the compassion of good will and the humility of a contrite heart. This God requires of nations and of individuals as the only and indispensable basis of peace. The proud, self-willed and covetous never do justice. Rulers rejecting the Christian way are blind leaders of the blind. Jesus when asked to arbitrate in a matter of inheritance, refused, saying beware of covetousness, implying that repenting of that sin they would settle their troubles peaceably.

The tremendous power of Christianity has been dissipated by its divisions. It is becoming reunited in one body on the true Christian Front; one faith, the teaching of Jesus; one baptism, the power of Madison—Those who like to put two and two together and arrive at something may make note of the fact that the most prominent Democratic leader will come to Madison this week-end to visit with Frank Murphy, Roosevelt's attorney general, leading New Dealer, and some think a presidential dark horse.

Murphy will be in town to make the principal speech at the LaFollette memorial exercises. They may also make note of the fact that Senator Robert M. LaFollette Jr., will come from the national capital to attend the memorial rites, and that during the same weekend he is having a moving with all the important Progressive leaders about his reelection campaign.

EXECUTIVE POWER
Because the new administration bill proposing to give the governor greater power in hiring state employees and in spending money for other purposes is already being attacked as a "dictator bill" it is appropriate to consider the Republican arguments for it.

First of their reminders is that the governor of the state is responsible for the public policy of the state during his term of office; he is held liable by the people for the doings of state departments and subordinate state officers, although his control over them may be extremely nominal or non-existent.

An excellent illustration is the Buckman case of last year. LaFollette, while he was governor, was attacked roundly for allowing something like that to happen during his administration. Yet the man who was later arraigned for his complicity in that case was entirely beyond the power of the governor, who would have removed him if he could.

Immediate reason for the introduction of the measure, however, appears to be annoyance arising out of recent experiences of Gov. Heil and some of the leading legislative committee chairmen. One Republican senator who heads a powerful committee reported the other day that his efforts to obtain information on expenditures and spending habits in state departments he has queried have been largely fruitless; department heads, trained in autocratic habits, didn't feel inclined to satisfy the prying curiosity of the new Republican bosses.

Others have reported that some progressive department heads after the 1938 election made considerable increases in payrolls, and that Republican administration men found that they couldn't do anything about it. Finally, the bill was introduced because Gov. Heil himself insisted upon it. The executive figures that he is handicapped in too many ways. Once he said that he is little more than an office boy. During another recent interview, he was asked how he liked his job. "I like it," he replied, "but I'd like it a thousand times more if I had the authority to run things as I have in my Milwaukee plant."

While it is presumable that the bill will pass, there will be consternation from those who even if they are willing to give Heil a free hand, don't like the idea of giving the same power to his successors, who are not yet known. A Republican may consider what his opinion would be if a Progressive were asked for the same power. However, the bill carries many of the implications which characterized the executive research bureau bill, now law, a bureau which has power granted to no previous state agency. It is interesting to note, though, that not all of Heil's suggestion for laws reach the legislative mill. Heil is not yet fully familiar with legislative politics. Republican leaders report that several times they have dissuaded him from introducing bills because his ideas were certain of swift death at the hands of the lawmakers, who do not always agree with the incumbent on the proper function of a governor.

OTHERS MISSING
Everybody has got his own personal system of doing things and as a rule, everybody you meet thinks his system is better than anybody else's. I know a man who plays the horse-races, and for the past forty years he's used one simple system which he figured out. He won't play any other system. He knows if he sticks to it, he's bound to win a race someday!

Everybody in the family was glad to hear that Uncle Jed's boy Dub, had finally got a job which he could hold. After being fired off about fourteen jobs in two years, he got a job with a cotton broker. A year later, Hod went to the manager and said, "Mr. Cateh, I want to thank you for givin' Dub a raise. That must prove he's worth something!"

The manager said, "Y'p. Dub is invaluable to me. Before I put out an order, I let Dub read it. If HE can figure out what it means, NOBODY ain't gonna misunderstand it!"

Traffic Set 1938 Pace in General Accident Decline

National Safety Council's Annual Publication to Be Released Soon

Traffic set the pace in a general decline of all types of accidents during 1938, the National Safety Council reported today.

This, the council pointed out, is noteworthy in view of the fact that for more than 30 years annual increases in traffic deaths have offset frequent decreases in other classes of accidents. Until last year traffic deaths had increased steadily from year to year, except in 1932.

Of the 11,000 lives saved in all types of accidents in the United States in 1938, the council said, 7,200 may be credited to traffic safety alone.

This is shown in the council's annual publication, "Accident Facts," soon to be released. The book contains a complete and detailed statistical review of all types of accidents in 1938.

The 18 per cent reduction in traffic fatalities compared, the council said, with a 13 per cent decrease in occupational deaths, an 8 per cent decline in public (not motor vehicle) deaths and a drop of only 2 per cent in fatal home accidents in 1938.

32,400 Deaths
This improvement warrants no feeling of complacency about traffic accidents, the council emphasized. Despite the 18 per cent decline, more deaths occurred in 1938 than in any other year since 1924. In addition there were 1,150,000 non-fatal injuries. The cost of the deaths, injuries and property damage is estimated at $1,500,000,000.

Accidents of all types claimed 94,000 victims last year. Besides the motor vehicle death toll of 32,400, deaths 16,500 and occupational fatalities 16,500. Twenty-eight hundred deaths were both occupational and motor vehicle.

"Those who have worked for greater traffic safety have every right to be encouraged by the 1938 improvement," said R. L. Forney, chief statistician of the National Safety Council. "It demonstrates that preventing traffic accidents throughout the nation is not a hopeless task."

"Further improvement will depend on careful analysis of circumstances and trends, so that effort can be concentrated on those phases of the problem which have shown least improvement. Let us try to visualize, then, what traffic safety progress has meant, in terms of lives saved, and what it can mean if our entire national record can be brought up to the highest standards of achievement."

Appleton Man Takes Post on Lonely West Indies Island To Help Forecast Hurricanes

To help gather information that will assist in forecasting the hurricanes which lash their fury on the southeastern coasts of the United States, a young Appleton man will leave next month for a little known island in the West Indies, where he and two or three companions will be almost isolated from the rest of the world.

He is H. W. Rahmlow, son of Mrs. Charles R. Rahmlow, 115 E. Hancock street, a graduate of Lawrence college and the University of Wisconsin and a government employee in the service of the weather bureau of the United States department of agriculture.

He and his wife and son have been visiting here at the home of his mother.

Rahmlow, who will leave next week for Washington, D. C., to get further instructions, is engaged in a relatively new type of weather bureau work, that of radio meteorograph. During the last year and a quarter he has been at Sault Ste. Marie, where he started one of the new stations.

Study Upper Air
Used in the new system is the radiosonde, a little radio transmitter which is sent up, attached to a balloon and a parachute, into the higher strata of the atmosphere, where it records the humidity, temperature and pressure and sends the information back to the radio receiver at the surface, where the record is received by means of a photo-electric cell. The radiosonde ascends about 21,000 meters, or from 12 to 14 miles, until the balloon bursts. The parachute slows its descent.

The island to which Mr. Rahmlow and probably an assistant and two navy radio operators will go has an inviting and civilized enough name, Swan island, but the only ship that ever stops there is a tramp steamer that comes about once every eight weeks. Its population, as far as is known, is 23, all of them of Negro descent.

Only 1 mile wide and 4 miles long, the island is divided into two parts, with a bay between. It is located between Jamaica and British Honduras, in the heart of the area where hurricanes are born.

Its handful of inhabitants take care of the American phosphate company's buildings on the island and also make their living by harvesting coconuts and limes and by fishing. The tramp steamers which call there occasionally pick up these products, as well as sharkskins and tropical water shells.

Heat is Oppressive
But the place is no island paradise. Located 17 degrees north of the geographical equator, the sun is overhead during most of our summer season. While the temperature ranges only between 72 and 92 degrees, the humidity is always very high, making the heat oppressive.

The United States weather bureau had a man on the island last year doing surface and pilot balloon work, but the radio meteorograph work Rahmlow will direct will be new and probably of inestimable value to aviation and the coastlands of southeastern United States.

Rahmlow and his companions will embark on their adventurous mission in July, sailing from Coco Solo, Panama Canal Zone naval base, on a navy ship. They also will be dependent upon the navy to return them to the United States in December.

They will be on the island only during the hurricane season, which is roughly from July to December. But they will take with them all the provisions they need for those five months, when they will be virtually isolated, except for radio, from the rest of the world.

Rahmlow studied at the University of Wisconsin after he received his B. A. degree at Lawrence college in 1939 and won his bachelor's degree in agriculture and education there. Then he entered the government service, first in forestry and later in the weather bureau. He operated one of the six original radio meteorograph stations, the one at Sault Ste. Marie.

5 Lawrence Students Are Representatives At Summer Conclaves

Five Lawrence students are representatives at conferences being held this week and next.

Beth Arveson, Milwaukee, junior, left yesterday to attend the National Methodist Student Leadership Training conference at Berea college, Berea, Ky., which opened yesterday and continues through Saturday.

Clark Nixon, Appleton, 1939 graduate, is student representative for this district on the executive committee of the general Y. M. C. A. conference at Lake Geneva this week. Melvin Heinke, Wausau, sophomore, is attending the conference.

Dorothy Martin, Racine, junior, and Mary Agnes Sheldon, junior, Shorewood, will be at a Lake Geneva conference next week. Miss Martin is a representative of the Lawrence Geneva committee.

Miss Arveson, Miss Sheldon, and Heinke are being sent by the Better Church council.

Bolens Proposal Seen as Warning To G. O. P. Heads

Measure Indicates Democrats
May Follow Independent Path

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—A proposal distributed by Senator Harry Bolens of Port Washington that the legislature adjourn for a period of 30 or 60 days in order to conduct a popular referendum on several fundamental questions of state financial policy including methods to avoid the new tax load contained in the Hell tax bill was widely interpreted in capitol circles today as a declaration of independence by the leader of the legislative Democratic bloc.

Republicans and Progressives feel that the lengthy public statement of the 76-year-old veteran was a hint that the Democrats may follow a more independent course in the future deliberations of the legislature in which the Republicans need Democratic votes for the success of their program.

Legislative observers agree that Senator Bolens, the acknowledged leader of the small Democratic minority, has been largely responsible for the success which has met the Republican legislative proposals thus far in the session.

Constitutes Warning
Both Progressives and Republicans believed that the Bolens program as contained in a 30-page report published and distributed all over the state at the weekend was a political signal designed to demonstrate that the Democratic party representatives are more than a tail of the Republican administration.

It was believed that the announcement constituted a warning that the Democrats may present an independent program, the lack of which has resulted in some criticism of the legislators of the party from some of their own party aides in recent months.

Others recalled that Senator Bolens was the Democratic candidate for governor last fall, and wondered whether the aged Ozaukee county representative is looking for another opportunity.

Republicans spokesmen reiterated that the administration had no part in the Bolens suggestions, and said they must have been prepared by him alone.

It was pointed out too that in recent weeks the Democrats have frequently refused to vote with the Republican majorities in test cases. There has been so little enthusiasm in the last week or two from the Democrats for the Republican reorganization bills that some administration supporters are fearful that a couple of them may die in the senate.

Time to Promote a Fishing Trip With Dad; Enter Contest

Hey, fellas, you only have the remainder of this week to promote that fishing trip with your dad, if you want to enter a fish in the Appleton Post-Crescent's Dad and Son Fishing Week contest to get a crack at that prize.

The week opens Sunday, June 18, and will continue through Sunday, June 25. And the prize is one that should gladden the heart of any fisherman, young or old. The Post-Crescent will give a rod and the Appleton league will give an anti-backlash reel and a pure silk line.

Now don't get the idea that your fish has to weigh 30 or 40 pounds, or even 10 pounds, to be a winner. Maybe a good sized bass or even a perch might win the coveted prize. Last year a pickerel weighing 4 pounds, 9 ounces won the rod and reel.

The contest was started to promote a better feeling of fellowship between fathers and their sons and the sponsors believe that one of the best ways to attain that end is for fathers and sons to get out into the open on some lake or stream and indulge in a sport that holds a mutual interest.

The contest is simple, the only stipulation being that the boy must go fishing with his dad, catch a fish and enter it in the contest by filling out the blank in this page. Any boy living in the Appleton area who has not yet reached the age of 17 is eligible to enter.

Asks Cooperation of Property Owners to Cut Corner Shrubs

Many property owners have cooperated with the city council's traffic committee and have cut shrubs over three feet high on boulevards and parkways at intersections but there still are many places where the work has not been done.

A city ordinance limits the height of bushes to three feet in the parkway area, between the curb and the sidewalk, for 50 feet from a street corner.

Appleton police have been contacting property owners to ask them to cut their shrubs to the height stipulated in the ordinance but have not been able to reach everyone. The traffic committee also asks the cooperation of property owners.

Bellak Predicts Glider Hops Over Ocean in 25 or 30 Years; Spans Lake in 70-Mile Flight

es, and "soaring energies" may provide for an ocean flight ultimately.

"We know," he said, "that a storm can start on this continent and wind up in Europe. A pilot might 'ride' a storm all the way over the ocean, or, if it gives out on him, he may find 'isolated energy' to use to the end of the trip."

Bellak confessed that he had feared the Lake Michigan flight would end with his Dove of Peace, a German-built glider with a 63-foot wingspread, landing in the water. He was fitted with a lifebelt.

He anticipated arriving over the Michigan shoreline at about 100 feet altitude, he said, "but as a matter of fact I was afraid I might go into the drink."

His 8,000-foot altitude when he reached Michigan was due, he said, to an unexpectedly strong "rising condition" in the atmosphere.

BEGAN IN 1928

Newark, N. J. — (AP)—Ted Bellak, who, spanned Lake Michigan in a motorless plane, took up gliding in 1928—inspired by the exploits of Lindbergh—and his first theoretical lessons came while he was a member of a Newark department store aviation club, his parents recalled today.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bellak said Ted had told them last January of his plans to hop across Lake Michigan, but he sent them no advance word of his take-off from Sturgeon Bay, Wis., yesterday.

"Ted never wanted his father or me to worry while he was flying," Mrs. Bellak explained, "and his lake flight was the most hazardous he'd ever attempted."

Relating the career of their 27-year old son, the Bellaks recalled that in 1932 he won a trip to a model plane meet at Elmira, N. Y., where his skill and ambition attracted the attention of Richard C. du Pont of the Delaware munitions du Ponts and himself a noted glider.

Du Pont offered young Bellak a job in his Wilmington, Del., factory, doing experimental work in the glider school at the plant. After three years there, Du Pont, financed a trip to Germany where Bellak studied at Stuttgart and Goppingen, where renowned aerologists of gliding enthusiasts and aeronauts work on the ship which carried him 54 miles over the waters of Lake Michigan yesterday.

APPEAL TO CONGRESS

Washington—(AP)—An effort to interest congress in use of gliders in the army's navigation training was made recently by Ted Bellak who crossed Lake Michigan in an engineless plane.

Representative Engel (R-Mich.) recalled today that Bellak and other representatives of the Soaring Society of America, Inc., appeared before a house appropriations subcommittee a month ago.

He said Bellak testified Germany, France and England had been using gliders as preliminary training, enabling instructors to determine if the prospective aviator was adapted to aviation without the expense of an extended study course.

"This flight across Lake Michigan," Engel said, "was part of the program to center war department attention on their proposal for preliminary training."

13 Hurt in Strike Riot; Heil Rejects Plea for Troopers

deputies — grown smaller today through "resignations"—was inadequate.

Harold W. Story, vice president of the company, joined with the sheriff in asking for protection of office workers.

Heil, after a conference with Mitten in the safety building, declared, "there is no occasion for troops." He issued a statement which read: "The sheriff Mitten informed me of the demonstration which occurred at the Allis-Chalmers plant today. I have been asked to send observers to watch the situation. My observers will be present until the strike is settled."

Issues Warning

"I earnestly appeal to the many law-abiding employees of Allis-Chalmers to keep the peace. Without law and order there is anarchy. There will be no anarchy in Wisconsin while I am governor."

After the governor's decision, Mitten served a formal demand upon the Milwaukee Police department for not less than 300 men. The sheriff said the demand was based on Heil's advice. He quoted the governor as saying: "You make your demand on the chief of police for all the men you want. It is up to him as a peace officer in this community to give you all the assistance you need."

Chief Joseph T. Kluchsky was reported out of town, so the demand was served on Lieutenant Adolph Ebert. There was no immediate assurance from Deputy Inspector Hugo Goehlen that the 300 men would be furnished.

Appeals to Police Chiefs

Mitten also telephoned chiefs of departments at Wauwatosa, Cudahy, Shorewood, South Milwaukee and Whitefish Bay, asking half of their uniformed men.

Heil did not say who his observers would be. Brigadier General Ralph M. Imnell, commander of the national guard under Heil, was reported to be in Washington, but associates said Lieutenant Colonel Nicholas M. Schantz, next in command, had been at West Allis yesterday.

The guard last was called for strike duty in the Schmedeman administration of 1933-34, when it was used twice to break the Kohler strike and a milk strike.

Picketing began at the plant yesterday as the strike formally replaced an 18-day "work holiday." A few minor tangles occurred, but there were no arrests.

Raps Demonstration

Story issued a statement in which he said he "personally witnessed today (Monday) a cowardly demonstration by a group of communists and radicals who threatened and mauled fifteen employees of our factory division (many of them women) as they left work at 5 p. m."

He said he contacted Sheriff Mitten and told him the situation was out of control and that the governor should send observers. "I took the step," he said, "to protect the reputation of our many fine employees who are members of Local 248, U. A. W., and the reputation of the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. company which is having its first labor dispute in 23 years."

He also paid tribute to the men on the picket line who "surely can take it."

The company issued its first formal statement on the strike situation today.

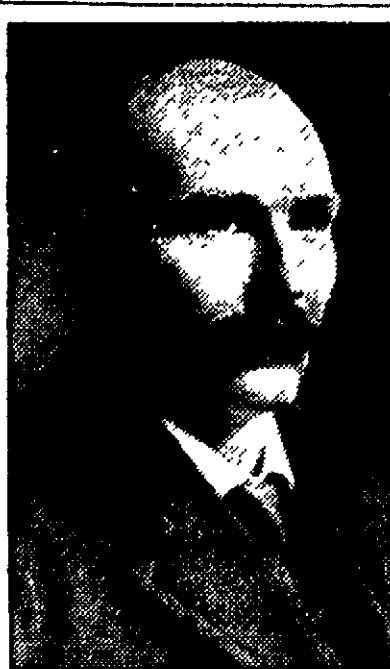

Mitten said two deputies had turned in their badges because a committee had called on them and warned them not to return to duty. About 6,000 production workers are affected by the strike. Harold M. Chaffetz, first president of the U. A. W. local, said the chief issue concerns machinery for handling grievances and that demands for a closed shop are not being pressed.

Company Statement

A statement issued today by officials of the strike-bound Allis-Chalmers Mfg. company plant declared the company could not accede to demands of the CIO United Automobile workers union local "for a union or closed shop, check-off system, and a joint contract to cover the operations of the West Allis, Pittsburgh and Boston plants."

Issued by Otto H. Falk, chairman, and Max W. Babb, president, the statement said "the contract in force in 1938 with the union was cancelled not by the company but by the union's bargaining committee. When, after cancellation, negotiations were entered into, the company offered to renew the 1938 contract word for word — without a single change."

The statement said the contract "respected the rights of every employee."

DIES AT DALE

David Zehner, 77, pioneer resident of the town of Dale, died unexpectedly at his home this morning. He was a former town clerk and supervisor, holding the former office for about 39 years.

David Zehner, 77, Succumbs at Dale

Pioneer Resident, Was Former Town Clerk And Supervisor

David Zehner, 77, Dale, former town clerk and town supervisor, died unexpectedly at his home about 7 o'clock this morning.

He was born in Dale and lived there his entire life. He was town clerk for about 30 years and served several terms as town supervisor.

Survivors are the widow; two daughters, Mrs. Otto Dorschner, Hortonville; Mrs. Len Dorschner, Dale; one son, Weid, Dale; seven grandchildren; and one great grandchild.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the Len Dorschner home with the Rev. L. T. Foreman, pastor of the Baptist church, Hortonville, in charge. Burial will be in the Pine Grove cemetery, Dale. The body will be taken to the Len Dorschner home Wednesday afternoon.

COMMITTEE MEETING

The street and bridge committee of the city council will meet at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon in city hall to consider requests for various street improvements. The committee's report will be submitted at council meeting Wednesday, June 21.

CONSIDER CAR BIDS

Bids on two squad cars and a 3-wheeled motorcycle for marking parked automobiles will be considered by the police and fire committee of the city council at a meeting at 7:30 tonight in city hall.

The union shop demand, the statement said, "would compel all employees to join the union, irrespective of their wishes, and in doing so would deprive them of their right of freedom of choice."

"The demand for a check-off system was also refused because the company believes that each employee should have the exclusive right to spend ... the money earned as a result of his work."

The company emphasized it had "not once refused to meet with the union's bargaining committee" and had arranged such meetings promptly.

Wage increases demanded, the statement said, "would amount to more than twice the company's total earnings" for 1938.

Helpful Advice

It is wise to decide funeral matters in advance. Many say they have found our advice extremely valuable.

Two Motorists in Court Following Traffic Accident

One Fined for Reckless Driving; Second Pleads Not Guilty

Clintonville—Two motorists appeared in justice court of Justice of the Peace E. E. Larson yesterday on charges of reckless driving following an accident involving three cars on Highway 45 a mile south of Clintonville about 1:30 Sunday morning.

Jack Hammerberg, 23, New London, first pleaded not guilty and then changed his plea to one of nolo contendere. He was fined $10 and costs. Donald McCrone, Bear Creek, pleaded not guilty to the charge and trial was set for 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Hammerberg was driving north on the highway when his car rolled over after it went about 200 feet along the side of the pavement. Hammerberg and occupants of the car, Earl Palmer, New London, and the Misses Rosella and Lupella Tank, Embarrass, were shaken up and bruised, according to Earl Polzin, Waupaca county traffic officer, and Ray Abrahamson, deputy sheriff, who investigated.

John Tietz, New London, accompanied by his wife and Otto Schellen, Clintonville, stopped his car to give aid and his machine was struck in the rear by a car driven by McCrone. Both cars were headed north at the time. Mahlon "Chief" Smith, Clintonville Indian, riding with McCrone, went through the windshield and received a severe laceration about the mouth. He was treated at the Community hospital. Other occupants of the cars escaped with minor bruises but the machines were badly damaged.

Colds are the result of an accumulation of poisonous materials in the body. Improper functioning of excretory organs causes this. ## Lake Geneva Gets State Convention Of Lions in 1940

August Fanslau, Two Rivers, Named Head of District 27B

Menasha — Lake Geneva was awarded the 1940 state Lions convention at the final business session of the 4-day session Tuesday morning at the Menasha High school auditorium. Madison withdrew its bid for the convention Tuesday morning while Merrill withdrew Monday morning. Madison announced that it would seek the 1941 convention.

Stevens Point was awarded the 1940 state bowling tournament over the bids of Thorp and West Milwaukee by a narrow margin. The votes were 50, 47 and 15. The Appleton Lions club withdrew its bid with the understanding that the bowling tournament is to rotate among the districts. Manitowish, also of district 27B, entertained the bowling tournament last year. South Milwaukee previously withdrew its bid in favor of West Milwaukee.

August Fanslau of Two Rivers was elected district governor from district 27B, defeating Charles Brame of Waupaca by one vote in the only race in which there was any opposition. Fanslau received 24 votes, Brame 23. Fanslau will succeed A. U. Stearns of Sturgeon Bay as district governor.

Other District Heads
Three men were elected district governors without any opposition. Dr. D. H. Adams of Appleton was named to succeed Dr. Harry Watson of Milwaukee as district governor of 27A. Dr. J. Van Patter of Marshfield was elected district governor in 27C to succeed A. W. Gerhard of Wausau. Leo Kehl of Madison was elected district governor of district 27D, a new district formed by the division of district 27A at the business session Monday afternoon.

Proposals were approved at the Tuesday morning session. The Waupaca club introduced a resolution that Wisconsin enter a bid for the international convention at some future date. A committee will be appointed to clarify rules under which the bowling tournament is conducted. The resolution was introduced by F. G. Larson of Appleton and Claude Mayer of Menasha.

The delegates voted to send O. C. Wordell of Brillion, state secretary, to the international convention at Pittsburgh and also expressed appreciation for his work. Thanks to the Menasha Lions club, host to the convention, and other civic groups that participated in making the convention a success was voted.

Will Aid Blind
Printing of Braille magazines for the blind again was voted. Appleton was named to succeed Badger Boys State, the Lions camp for boys sponsored by the Milwaukee clubs and the Milwaukee Athletic Association for the blind, a project of the Milwaukee central club which has promoted bowling, baseball, golf and swimming among the blind.

The delegates voted $50 to help send the German flag to the West Milwaukee club to the national convention at Pittsburgh. Individual contributions were received from the Weyauwega, Green Bay, Janesville and Fort Atkinson clubs.

A resolution entitling district governors and deputy district governors to vote at the state conventions was tabled. Dr. Harry Watson, district governor of 27A, presided at the Tuesday session.

Offers Invocation
The Rev. W. A. Jacobson, pastor of the First Congregational church, offered the invocation at the opening of the Tuesday session. The Menasha pastor also conducted the necrology ceremony in which the delegates paid tribute to deceased members of the various clubs.

M. F. Crowley, convention general chairman, reported 168 registrations for the convention. He offered suggestions to those who will attend the 1940 convention. The new district governors were introduced as well as district deputies.

A dinner and stag party at Germania hall concluded the convention activities Tuesday afternoon. A dessert bridge for the women was held Monday afternoon at Butte des Morts Golf club and a tour of the Kimberly-Clark Lakeview mill was conducted Tuesday morning.

Colleges Can't Build Character, Dean Tells Lions
Can be Fostered but Not Acquired by Study, Sellery Says

Menasha — Colleges and universities cannot build character, Dean George C. Sellery of the University of Wisconsin told delegates to the state Lions convention at the Monday afternoon business session at the Menasha High school auditorium.

"Character is inherited and can be fostered but it cannot be acquired by study," the veteran educator declared. He pointed out that admiration of some one with a well-rounded character can result in improvement in the character of a youth.

The dean divided his discussion of knowledge inside college and out into three sections. In the first he discussed the problem of unifying the academic fragments such as literature, science and politics. He pointed out that even 600 years ago writers criticized educators in special fields because those educators thought their particular subject was the only important one and alone could supply sufficient knowledge for the government of the world.

Sellery warned against unifying the various academic subjects to face a difficult task. Comprehensive examinations at the end of four years of schooling, only show the student's aptitude in the field in which he specialized. Orientation courses in which the instructor covers the whole field result in work by the teacher but the student is passive.

Teaching To Think
Having the instructor hook-up his course with other fields is satisfactory only when the instructor himself has a well-rounded education and too often the instructor is interested only in his particular field. "The chief purpose of a college education is to teach the student to think, to discriminate, to have insight," the dean declared.

The second problem discussed by the dean was the unification of college studies with life. Bookish knowledge alone is not enough, the dean said. He pointed out that many students acquire theoretical knowledge but cannot handle concrete problems. "Success in books at college is no guarantee of success in the world."

The dean declared that the task of the school is not to train leaders because the talent for affairs must be endowed by nature. Teaching can only stimulate, give directions and indicate shortcuts in learning but the flair for leadership must be inborn.

Predicts Change
"The time is coming when society no longer can afford to send the unbookish to college," the Wisconsin man declared. "Only those who are natural, who study because they like to study in high school, should go to college." The dean said that others will be happier if they go to work and they will get education in practice. He pointed out Charles Lindbergh as an example of the type of person who did not have ability in the bookish line but who made a success when facing concrete problems.

More money is being spent for the assistance of the aged and as a result there is less money for education, the dean stated. Therefore, only those who will benefit by studies should go to college, the dean advised.

In conclusion the dean warned his listeners not to consider those who do not succeed in bookish learning as dull. He advised the college trainer not to look too high at those who haven't gone to college because that group has even more talent than the college group. "Men of great affairs are born, not made in college."

Highway Body Denies Traffic Light Request

Neenah Supervisor Suggests Flasher Signal At Intersection

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau
Oshkosh — The intersection of Main street and Superhighway 41 in the town of Neenah will not have a stop and go light, the state highway commission informed the Winnebago board in a letter this morning.

In answer to petitions presented more than a year ago by residents of the town of Neenah and a resolution from the county board, the state highway commission said that it did not consider a light necessary. One of the major items in the argument for the light was the traffic hazard during funeral processions on Main street.

The commission said that county police could regulate traffic on these occasions. The county clerk then informed the board that police service is available if Twin City funeral directors would inform the sheriff's department of the day and time of funerals.

Suggests Flasher
As a final remark on the subject, Supervisor Henry Schultz, Fourth ward, Neenah, said that he was not satisfied with the commission's action and suggested that, if nothing else, a flasher signal might be installed at that point.

The balance of the morning session was taken up with the discussion of the erection of a temporary bridge over the Fox river in the village of Eureka, town of Rushford. Construction work on a new bridge started there several days ago.

A delegation of Eureka residents appeared before the board and pleaded for passage of a resolution which would appropriate $10,000 for the construction of a temporary bridge. Harold Ellis, chairman of the delegation, said that with the present bridge closed, persons residing on the south side of the river must travel seven or eight miles to either Berlin or Omro to cross the river. No action had been taken at noon.

ored repeatedly when next spring's Academy Awards are voted, is rated as a "Class B" production! In National Box Office Digest, that rating is no reflection on the picture's importance; it merely designates the production cost. "Dark Victory," which I had tabbed at least a million dollar super-expensive, actually cost the Warner Brothers between $200,000 and $300,000. And its box office record, to date, points to something like one and a half million clear profit!

Ask any producer why there are not more "success stories" like that, and he's sure to answer that it's impossible to make pictures like "Dark Victory" in quantity. All right—maybe it is. Maybe Hollywood is trying to produce TOO MANY pictures. Suppose that producers who make 52 features a year—and wait because they show only a seven or eight million dollar profit, were to get down to brass tacks and produce, say twenty pictures, as inexpensively, and as painstakingly, as "Dark Victory." There is every reason to believe that the profits might soar to near the $300,000 mark. I'll admit that a "Dark Victory" can only result from real thought and effort—but on the other hand, $300,000 profit is far from hay and should be worth the trouble.

CUFF NOTES: Metro is dickering with Maude Adams, famous stage star, to replace Garbo in the Madame Curie role—the "Ayes" insist that she and the scientist were peas-in-a-pod. Jack Benny will be delegate No. 1 and guest of honor at the American Legion's national convention in Chicago. Blue-pencil those persistent rumors that Janet Gaynor and Adolphe have called it off. It's win, place and show, in that order, for Woolworth Donahue, Walter Wanger and John McClain in the race for Joan Bennett's affections.

Hollywood — Out of idle curiosity, I tried to look up the financial record of "Dark Victory" in National Box Office Digest (a trade paper)—and was amazed to find it apparently unlisted.

A second and more thorough search revealed that I was looking in the wrong column—but left me still more amazed than before. "Dark Victory," a box office bonanza, raved about by critics and fans alike, boasting one of the finest casts obtainable, and almost sure to be ob-

Cubs in Chicago For Crucial Series

Begin Three Weeks' Stand That Will Make Or Break Team

HITTING IS BAD

None of the Regulars Batting Over .300; Hartnett Is Sad

BY TOM SILER
CHICAGO—(AP)—For those rabid north side baseball fans the suspense is terrible, but they should have some rather conclusive information on the pennant chances of the Chicago Cubs within the next three weeks.

Tomorrow the National league champions, after floundering around the first third of the race, begin a home stand for 20 of their next 23 games—a period that probably will declare them in or out of the flag race.

So far the Cubs haven't been in the chase. For every misfortune that has struck the team the once jovial countenance of Manager Gabby Hartnett has grown a little longer. Sad-faced Gabby now knows there is much more to piloting a big league team, especially a defending champion, than September winning streaks and dramatic home runs.

Statistics alone tell an eloquent story of the mediocrity of the Cubs. None of Gabby's regulars are hitting over .300, only two starting pitchers are above the .500 mark in the won-lost column, and Bill Lee, the National league's top hurler last year, has won only four games while losing seven.

When you figure the four able-bodied outfielders are hitting a meager .269 and the infield only .278 you wonder how the Cubs have managed to play .500 ball. Now they are a half game above that mark, but they're seven full games behind the front-running Cincinnati Reds.

And Hartnett's boys can't expect the aggressive Reds to back out of the race late in the season as Pittsburgh did a year ago, enabling the Cubs, backed by a 10-straight winning string, to sneak into first place the last week of the season. Every club except Pittsburgh comes to town for a series between now and July 4 when the home stand ends. Baseball tradition has it that the leader on that holiday is the ultimate flag winner—a tradition backed by figures. So the flag-hunting Cubs have their work cut out for them, and a big three-week order is it, too.

Cunningham to Race Wooderson

Glen Telephones Acceptance; Woodruff Enters in Half Mile

BY EDWARD S. TWARDY
PRINCETON, N. J. (AP)—Having mulled the situation carefully, the Princeton athletic authorities, after consulting with Glen Cunningham, are accepting bids to the Princeton invitation track meet almost as fast as Washington downers accepted invitation to Lady Lindsay's tea party.

Up until last night it looked as though the Princeton athletic authorities would have to draft Johnson and a couple of day geldings to compete with Englishman Sydney Wooderson in the mile run at Palmer stadium Sunday.

But friend Cunningham, a Kansas speedster, wiped away the worry when he telephoned from Cornwall-on-Hudson that he felt in the fettle and would have a bit of a go with Mr. Wooderson over the fast Palmer track.

Finishing close behind Cunningham in acceptances was Johnny Woodruff, University of Pittsburgh's Negro star who changed his mind a second time within a few hours and decided to run in the 880 here instead of appearing at the N. C. A. A. at Los Angeles.

Soon after Woodruff's capitulation came word from Denton, Texas, that the Rideout twins, Wayne and Blaine, were enroute from North Texas Teachers college.

Just before leaving, Wayne married co-ed Emma Jean Watson at Henderson, Texas. He also is bringing with him a handicap of 30 days' absence from active training because of a muscle injury.

Blaine will make a fourth in the mile which pits Great Britain's world record-holder against Cunningham, Chuck Fenske and Archie San Remo.

Wooderson, holder of the outdoor record of 4:06.4, arrived from England yesterday. He expressed eagerness to meet Cunningham, holder of the indoor record of 4:04.4.

NELSON WINS U. S. OPEN

Craig Wood Has Lost Playoffs For Four Greatest Golf Titles

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—When the final history of golf is written, there should be somewhere near the front a special section devoted to Craig Wood, the man who came closer to winning more big championships than any divot digger who ever lived. And who continued to smile as he went to the next tee.

Craig completed his reverse "grand slam" yesterday when he lost by three strokes to young Byron Nelson in the second 18-hole playoff for the national open title at the Spring Mill course. For 72 holes of the tournament proper and through Sunday's sun scorched round the 37-year-old "never won" battled the new champion stroke for stroke. Finally, as Nelson pounded out a 70 yesterday, Wood went down fighting to the last ditch and bunker.

Wood now has lost playoffs for the four greatest titles in reach of a professional. Denny Shute outlasted him in the British open. Paul Runyan beat him in a 36-hole final for the P. G. A. crown. Gene Sarazen shot his famous "double eagle" to tie Wood in the Augusta Masters and then trim him in the playoff.

Nelson already has his eyes on the Ryder cup team, but he isn't going to do much about it until well-wishers stop trouping to his door and he himself can get used to the big silver cup.

He seems things have been pretty hazy generally ever since he reached the home green and realized that here, at last, was fame.

He denied reports that an old Texas friend, J. K. Wadley, had promised him an oil well if he won the open. He admitted, however, that the Texas promoter had promised him "a present."

No Tildens, Budes, Riggs in This Section? Boys Entries in Tennis School Coming Slowly

BY GORDON MCINTIRE
BREATHES there a boy with soul so dead who never to himself hath said—I might be another Tilden, or Budge or Bobby Riggs. . . .

Apparently not, because the male interest in the free tennis school to be offered by the Appleton Post-Crescent starting next week at the Appleton High school courts, is rather low. The girls have shown considerably more enthusiasm and interest and perhaps we'll have to have three classes for them instead of two for the boys.

For instance, this morning's mail brought 28 new registrations which sent the total over the 100 mark but in that 'group there were 20 girls' registrations and 8 boys and men. It just doesn't add up correctly.

At Appleton High school you hear about the boys tennis team and in the tournaments hereabouts the boys usually have the largest number of entries. But apparently the lads are afraid of instructions or don't want to take the time to learn and practice.

We're still looking for the names of many boys who last month represented the high school in tennis competition. They were enthusiastic when they won even a set, yet they don't appear to be interested in getting a lot of free instruction from one of the best tennis instructors in the state and the Fox river valley, George LaBorde, Oshkosh.

Open to Anyone

The Appleton Post-Crescent tennis school is open to any boy or girl, man or woman interested in tennis regardless of how long they have played. There will be four lessons and they will treat with the fundamental points of the game. In other words, the instruction is of the kind that can be used by everyone; one or two little things from Mr. LaBorde may change a player from a fair to a mediocre performer, from a mediocre to a good player, or from a good player to one of the best.

Tennis has grown by leaps and bounds in this section of the state during the last few years. The visits to Appleton, Neenah and Menasha of nationally known tennis stars has been a great incentive. Also the breaking down of the idea that the sport was costly. It now probably is the cheapest because a racket lasts several seasons and three tennis balls will last a long, long time.

Construction of all-weather courts in the parks, at Appleton High school where the Post-Crescent school will be held, on the college campus and in neighboring cities also has resulted in more players. There's no reason to doubt that tennis soon will become something of a universal sport hereabouts, a sport to be played by all ages and by men and women, girls and boys.

There's a registration blank for the tennis school on the sport page again today. Fill it out and mail or bring it to the Appleton Post-Crescent. Thursday is the last day the blank will appear because Friday noon is the closing day on registrations. Classes will start on Monday, June 19, for the boys and men, and on Tuesday, June 20, for the girls and women.

The school is open to any person interested in tennis residing in the Appleton Post-Crescent circulation area. Specifically included are Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Kimberly, Little Chute, Kaukauna, Seymour, Black Creek, Shiocton, New London, Clintonville, Marion, Waupaca, Manawa, Weyauwega, Dale, Medina, Hortonville and the neighboring territory.

Shoots 84 in Qualifying Round of Women's Open Golf Tourney

St. Louis—(AP)—Mrs. Opal S. Hill, veteran Kansas City professional was paired with Mrs. W. F. Anderson of St. Louis today in the opening round of match play in the women's open golf tournament.

Mrs. Hill won medalist honors in the qualifying round by shooting a 41-84, 121 over par, over a rain-soaked Westwood country club course. She won the western in 1935 and 1936.

Another pre-tournament favorite, Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb, Woodmere, N. Y., drew as her opponent Dorothy Foster of Springfield, Ill. Mrs. Harb, 1931 national champion and winner of the western open in 1937, was only one stroke behind Mrs. Hill as was Ellamae Williams of Chicago, one of the country's outstanding amateurs.

6 Others Under 90
Six other contenders broke 90. Among them were Jeanne Cline, 15-year-old Bloomington, Ill. school girl, 88; and Goldie Bateson, Milwaukee, Wis., 88.

Other first round championship flight pairings included: Helen Hoffmann, Salt Lake City, (90), versus Margaret Kinerk, South Bend, Ind. (93).

Jeanne Cline, Bloomington, Ill. (88) versus Iva Mac Picher, Mexico, Mo. (95).

Lower bracket: Mrs. Alberta Neblett, New Orleans, (87), versus Mrs. J. Calbert Shorb, South Bend, Ind. (95).

Goldie Bateson, Milwaukee, Wis. (88), versus Marjorie Brown, Springfield, Ill. (95).

Eighteen-hole scores yesterday included: Mrs. Mary Wall, Menominee, Mich., 50-49-99. She qualified for the second flight.

New Haven, Conn.—George Pepe, 141, Meriden, Conn., and Oscar Suggs, 145, Fall River, Mass., drew (6).

Poughkeepsie on Regatta Day Means Boats, Pennants, Dancing, Alumni, Beer

(To sport fans some cities are known chiefly for sports spectacles: Louisville for the Derby, Baltimore for the Preakness, Pasadena for the Rose Bowl, Indianapolis for the 500-mile auto race, Goshen for the Hambletonian trotting classic, Poughkeepsie for the Intercollegiate regatta. Each city has its day in the sportful sun. Here's how one city—Poughkeepsie—behaves on its day. The Intercollegiate rowing championship will be June 17.)

By The AP Feature Service
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Poughkeepsie has been the heart of American rowing since a torrid day in 1865 when 10,000 rowers lined the Hudson river banks to watch a Poughkeepsie amateur four-oared crew defeat the Brooklyn Biglins with a disputed decision that remained unsettled until two men were violently killed.

That lusty regatta and its two days of ribald revelry was the forerunner to the 44-year-old intercollegiate eight-oared rowing championship that will be renewed June 17.

Around 50,000 spectators will crowd into this river town on Regatta day, more than usual this year because the race will be run on a Saturday and because the East, which broke the Far West's domination a year ago, has strong contenders again.

Near Roosevelt Home
Some watchers will line the broad, four-mile course along the Hudson from Krum Elbow, starting point adjacent to President Roosevelt's summer White House at Hyde Park, to the colorful flotilla of flag-bedecked government and private craft which form a funnel at the finish line near the city.

Other spectators will pay $5 and ride the observation train that shuttles back and forth following the races. Some persons will be invited aboard government or private ships. A few individuals will pilot their own little skiffs.

The city will be gaily decorated. There's to be a block dance Regatta night. Due to the Saturday date, many persons are expected to make a weekend of the crew classic, with railroad and boat excursions designed to attract World's Fair visitors.

The city's business increases 25 per cent on Regatta day with hotels, taxis and restaurants enjoying most of it. The uptown merchants practically close shop during the Regatta afternoon. Roadhouses, bars and similar celebratory spots figure on Regatta night even more than New Year's. Prices, they say, are not hiked up.

City Goes Collegiate
Poughkeepsie is turned over to visiting alumni, students and sports fans. The city's attire is gay and collegiate with streets and stores plastered with pennant colors of the competing teams. If the day is wet, as during the past few weeks, sou'westers appear and rubber hats are worn. Hotel lobbies are thronged with crowds. Bars do a rushing business. Scotch and soda is the perennial regatta favorite alumni drink. Students generally go for the more economical beer.

By early afternoon the city proper is deserted, as the thousands stream to the waterfront, a 15-minute walk. Many persons park cars on craggy bluffs and listen to radio broadcasts of the race until the crews can be sighted with field glasses.

High above the race, on a railroad bridge, swings Mike Bogo, a huge bartender who is the official regatta bomb-shooter. When the race is done Mike shoots the number of bombs to correspond with the winning lane number and lowers a string of college flags, hung in the order of the finish.

Dance Till Dawn
Regatta night is a night of revelry. Bars are four-deep. Roadhouse reservations are sold out. Every hotel room is a party room. Dancing lasts until dawn. Collegiate pranks are numerous. The police are lenient.

The varsity race is the big attraction, but there are junior varsity and freshman races, too.

Kaukauna—The Mellow Brews of the Fox River Valley baseball league will continue their fight for first half honors here Wednesday evening, meeting Manitowoc under the lights. The game is a postponed contest rained out May 28.

The lights will be turned on again Thursday evening when Kimberly and Little Chute clash in a contest rained out May 28. Kaukauna fans will be pulling for the Chutes, who dealt the Kaws their only defeat of the year, to knock over the undefeated Kimberly nine. This event, if Kaukauna beats Manitowoc, will knot the teams for the league top.

The Kaukauna-Neenah game, rained out Sunday, will be played off Sunday morning at Neenah.

Gib Busse, Kaukauna star fielder and right now second best hitter on the team, is out for these games. Manager Joey Vils said today. Dago Schuler, a brother of Eddie Schuler, has been added to the squad. With the Schuler brothers, Bob Gresenz and Ray Dierdick on hand, the hurling department shapes up well.

Manitowoc will bring a veteran lineup to town, with an outstanding hurler in Lefty Tolman, who last year rang up 17 straight wins in another league. Lefty has quite a reputation as a strikeout artist, and is particularly effective under the lights. Supporting the star hurler are several players currently hitting over .400.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

BABY BIRDS

A new-hatched chick may seem a bit puzzled about the world into which it has come. It is likely to stand around for a while, and perhaps it will shake itself, but soon it starts walking or running. It looks for something to eat and finds it.

Four baby jays all waiting for the same thing.

When under the care of a hen, little chicks follow her about. She appears to teach them things, and surely she "mothers" them under her wings. Yet chicks which come from an incubator get along well enough if they are supplied with water and proper food, and are kept from being chilled.

It is a different story with birds which are born in nests in trees. They hatch from smaller eggs and for many days they are not fitted to go into the wide world. Hour after hour, day after day, their parents work to obtain food for them.

The greed of baby birds seems to have no end. When one of the tid-bits, the babies show that while they may be little they at least have big mouths! Each baby opens his mouth waiting for worms, insects, seeds or other food to be dropped in, or pushed in.

Baby birds often have fluffy "down" on their bodies when they come from the egg, but not always. New-hatched sparrows are bare as they can be, and the same is true of young crows. Baby owls are bare, or almost bare, at the start, but they quickly grow a thick coat of down. Sparrows and crows are much slower in growing down, but at last they do obtain it.

The kingfisher is among the few kinds of birds which do not have down before they grow feathers. The down of a bird may not be colored at all like the feathers of its parents. The snowy owl, for example, has white feathers, but its young are covered with black down. Feathers take the place of down when some birds are three weeks old. Other young birds do not obtain all their feathers until they are four weeks old, or more. When they have all their plumage, we say they are "full-fledged."

Sooner or later, the baby bird leaves its nest. In general, the little ones show they want to get started making their own way, but some seem to hang back and to need a little pushing before they go over the edge for their first flight.

Now and then we may come upon a baby bird which has left its nest too soon, and is helpless on the ground. If it does not have all its feathers, and if we can do so without danger to ourselves, it is well to put the baby bird back in its nest. When a baby bird must be handled, great care should be taken to be gentle with it, and not to hold it long.

Bordens Win in Industrial Loop

Nose Out Prah's 3 to 2, For Fourth Successive Victory

INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE

Standings:	W	L
Bordens	4	0
Gambles	4	1
K. C.	1	3
Prah's News	0	4

New London — Bordens remained undefeated in four starts when they came out the victors over Prah's News by a scant margin of 3 to 2 in one of the best Industrial league softball games of the season at Washington High school grounds Monday evening.

In a tight pitching duel Anton Herres of the News team allowed five hits and Leonard Hoffman, ace pitcher for Bordens, allowed three. The news boys let three men on bases through error in the fifth inning when they trailed 3 to 0 but none scored. Herres started when the boys came back with two hits in the last of the fifth, hitting a triple with two men on bases to count the only runs of the game.

Each pitcher allowed two walks but Hoffman's went fruitless while Bordens converted on both of their opportunities. A home run by Cliff Decker counted for two runs in the fourth inning while Louis Sawall slammed a free run home with a 2-bagger in the third.

Bordens will meet the second place Gambles in a crucial tilt Wednesday evening.

Playing in the Senior Men's league this evening are the Plywood versus Edison and Bordens versus Lutheran Team 2.

Bulldogs to Seek Win Over Seymour In State League

Krohn or Decker Will Pitch for New London In Night Game

New London — Preeved over a 5 to 4 loss to Clintonville which they think they should have had, the New London Bulldogs of the Northern State league are primed to rip Seymour apart when Seymour invades the New London diamond for the first night game of the season at 8:15 Wednesday evening.

A hit by Pete Westphal that the umpire ruled bounced over the fence and held to a 2-bagger might have changed the whole aspect of Sunday night's game as it was a nip and tuck battle to the finish and the Truellers made it by only one run. It was argued that Westphal's hit was a clean home run.

Baldy Hauk was missing from the line-up Sunday but his hitting was replaced by Tip Krohn who came out of a batting slump to slam a trio of extra base hits, a homer and two doubles.

Seymour should be a favorable opponent for the revamped Bulldogs. They have broken even in four games to date. Of pitchers Penstadler, Kelley and Weisgraber, Manager Bill Rowe probably will use the latter on the mound with his fast ball under the lights.

Either Tip Krohn, who has been trying a comeback on the mound, or Cliff Decker will pitch for the New Londoners Wednesday evening. Orin Krohn will be the plate and Orville Hauk will play second. Steffen on first, Pat Grignon at short and Marilyn Munch on third will complete the infield. In the deep grass will be Vande Waile, Palmer and Westphal with Jerry Grignon as a general alternate.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

Finally, looking down at her abstracted eyes, he accused petulantly, "You aren't even listening to me, Lyn! If I bore you so terribly perhaps you'd like to finish the dance with someone else."

He felt her startled movement and followed her glance toward the entrance where a tall young man in immaculate evening clothes stood surveying the dancers with bold black eyes, a half smile on his mouth.

"It — it's Tally —" Jocelyn gasped. "He's coming toward us — he's going to cut in —"

"Who invited him?" Geoff blustered. "I'll have him thrown out!"

"I invited him. Don't you dare make a scene, Geoff Kensing!"

Then Tally was next to them, smiling down at Jocelyn as if they were the best of friends. "May I cut in?"

Feeling as if all volition had left her, she went into his arms; felt them tighten about her slender figure and guide her into smooth steps. He could dance. And well. She relaxed a trifle and dared a peek upwards. He appeared perfectly composed and at ease. He did not look out of place or strange. He might be any one of the young men in the club set.

Other couples passing them stared curiously. Tally said: "Disappointed because I didn't wear my overalls and boots?"

To save her life she could not have answered one word. Relief swept her as the dance ended and she took her hand over to Geoffrey. Meeting Geoff's eyes squarely he held out his hand, saying, "I haven't met, Mr. Kensing; I'm Talbot Mack."

Geoffrey extended a limp, unwilling hand, appraising young Mack with hostile eyes as their hands clasped briefly. Then Nola sauntered up and greeted Tally with a warmth that froze Thorn's frown on his face.

"I'm so glad you've come," she smiled, her eyes twinkling as she noted the growing circle about them. "I can't tell you how pleased I was when Jocelyn told me she had insisted on your being with us tonight. Has she introduced you to everyone? No?" Nola turned to Lyn who was palpably bewildered and annoyed. "Lyn, darling introduce your guests to the evening? We want to know everyone, don't we, Tally?"

Jocelyn, her chin set stubbornly, took Nola and Tally on a round of the ballroom, her blue eyes becoming stormier with each introduction she performed.

Ruth Benton smiled archly. "What's the idea of holding out on the rest of us?" she scolded. "You can expect plenty of female visitors from now on!"

Most of Lyn's girl friends made similar remarks.

Jocelyn felt she had reached the bursting point when Eleanor Illington invited Tally to a party the following afternoon.

"I'm afraid Mr. Mack will have to disappoint you," she said, striving for control. "He has cows and chickens and a truck garden to look after."

"Yes," he agreed with impeccable good humor. "I happen to be a farmer, Miss Illington."

Mocking

"Why, that's marvelous!" Eleanor cooed. "I had no idea you were the young man from Texas."

A blast from the orchestra halted conversation. Without asking permission, Tally drew Jocelyn into his arms and danced her out on the floor. Geoffrey, a vexed expression on his usually mild face, cut in. Over his shoulder Jocelyn watched Tally find Nola and sweep her, laughing, into the dance. There was a resentful twinge in the region of Lyn's heart.

Geoff blurted, "Just what is the idea of asking him here?"

"Because I wanted to."

"But why? You said you couldn't bear him."

"I can't."

"Then why on earth..."

"You don't understand women, Geoff."

"I guess I don't! I guess no man does."

"I think," mused Jocelyn, "there is one man who understands them far too well." A little laugh of self-derision escaped her. Tally had known very well just why he had been invited. Once again he had thwarted her.

Geoffrey, preoccupied, missed a step and trod on her small green slippers.

"Haven't you better call the veterinary and find out the state of your pony's health?" she suggested. "You certainly haven't your mind on dancing."

His eyes were uneasy. "Come outside with me, Lyn. I want to talk to you."

In the semi-darkness of a porch corner he lifted her chin with his finger-tips. "You do love me, don't you, Lyn? I've never questioned it before, but now..."

"Then why now?" she asked lightly, absorbing all the dear familiarity of him. This was the man she wanted for life. Substantial; dependable; her own kind of person. He would make a dutiful husband—and a fine father for their children. He was good to look at, too. He had a nice firm face; clear fair skin; pleasant hazel eyes; and...

"Of course I love you, Geoff," she declared.

He appeared satisfied. His lips brushed her forehead. "I know our love affair has never been one of those wild, reckless things you read about in books and see in movies," he said; "but that sort of thing isn't real, anyhow. We aren't that kind of people, are we, Lyn? We are restrained, well-bred, intelligent persons who plan our lives with our heads instead of our emotions. That's why our marriage will be a success while these others will be failures—Look at the example your grandmother set—"

"Yes," Lyn thought, "I have. She spent her entire life wishing she had married another man! Is this quiet, friendly feeling I have for Geoff really love? Is it all I will ever feel? Or will marriage make a difference?"

"You're shivering, dear," he broke in on her disturbing thoughts. "Let me take you inside."

The evening went merrily on for everyone but Jocelyn; or so she told herself. No matter who her dancing partner was Tally continued consistently cut in. He snatched her ardently; he smiled into her eyes; he clung to her hands when the music stopped. He behaved, to all appearances, as a man completely enthralled with a girl.

"Yet he isn't," Jocelyn thought, hotly resentful. "Beneath it all he's mocking me, laughing at me, enjoying the way everyone is talking about us!"
